Jones Regains Rubber Rule; Other Powers Cut by BEW

Wallace Order Breaks His Hold On the Purchase Of 4 Key Imports

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Vice President Henry A. Wallace yesterday ordered four financing agencies controlled by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones stripped of power over foreign purchasing of strategic materials after Jones with the aid of Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers regained control over foreign rubber purchasing.

Wallace, who acted as chairman of BEW, had inserted in the Federal Register a directive order which leaves the Jones agencies nothing more than financial backers of BEW's activities without power or discretion.

The personnel of the four agencies which have been doing work for BEW will be transferred or detailed to BEW by February 10, under Wallace's order.

Agencies Listed

The four agencies involved are Defense Supplies Corp., Metals Reserve Co., United States Commercial Credit Co. and the Defense Plant Corp.

Rubber Reserve Corp., another Jones agency, was not listed because Jeffers, drawing on his powers as rubber "czar" had previously transferred to Rubber Reserve, foreign rubber purchasing activities which BEW had performed with Jones' financial backing, it was learned.

The new directive from Wallace provided that negotiation, preparation, supervision and administration of all import contracts will be handled by BEW's Office of Imports after February 25. Jones' men had performed many of these functions for BEW in connection with a number of strategic materials.

Unification Effort

Left to Jones under the Wallace directive were strictly financial functions including payment of money, handling of accounts and receipt of goods.

All communications regarding import contracts will have to be carried on through BEW after February 25 under Wallace's order.

Jeffers explained yesterday that he transferred authority over rubber to Rubber Reserve to end divided authority over one phase of his program.

In issuing the order, Jeffers asked BEW to cooperate with him in developing rubber programs for Rubber Reserve to carry out. BEW agreed to make its staff available for any assignment from Jeffers, it was learned.

However, it was learned that BEW officials believe that Jones—not Jeffers—will be running the foreign rubber show since BEW and Rubber Reserve are the only two organizations in the Government with adequate staffs to develop rubber purchase programs.

A spokesman for the Board of Economic Warfare explained that under the new relationship, BEW could keep men in the field to advise Jeffers of purchases to be made, but no rubber could be bought without a directive from Jeffers to Jones.

BEW Handles Shipping Licenses

Actual carrying out of Jeffers' rubber-purchase directives would be left to Jones, with the understanding that BEW could make reports on how Jones carries out the directives. BEW would continue to handle shipping licenses in connection with the rubber program.

The new arrangement marked another round in the long-standing and bitter feud between the BEW and Jones. During the defense program days and the early days of the war program, BEW officials continually complained that the typical "banker attitude" which has dominated Jones organization was hampering this country's program to purchase critical items including rubber abroad.

Last April 13, after it had become apparent that our failure to acquire an adequate rubber stockpile was having serious consequences, President Roosevelt is-

Davies Discloses Nazis Made Peace Proposal in 1940

Los Angeles, Jan. 20 (AP).—Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, disclosed today that in 1940 he was approached by Nazi spokesmen—at a conference suggested by "certain well-meaning citizens of our own country"—with a proposed peace treaty, to be signed by German military or other government officials and under which Hitler would be "retired."

"I made it clear to these gentlemen that, in my opinion, it was an impossible peace," declared Davies in a Town Hall speech.

Echoes of Paving Block Scandal

La Guardia, 5 Others Called To Tell of Flynn's Political Past

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee last night voted to delve into the political history of Edward J. Flynn to the extent of inviting for public examination six persons with first-hand knowledge of some of the charges that for the present stand between the Tammany boss of the Bronx and his confirmation as President Roosevelt's "roving" Ambassador in the Far Pacific and Minister to Australia.

The decision was reached in an executive session after 5 hours and 20 minutes of a public hearing during which the committee gave appearances of being impressed by Flynn's categorical denial of the charges and unimpressed by the assertion of his chief accuser that parts of the testimony of the retired chairman of the Democratic National Committee constituted perjury.

At the close of the executive session for which the big caucus room in the Senate Office Building had to be cleared of approximately 500 spectators, many of whom had stood throughout the proceedings, Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, the chairman, told reporters the committee decided to "invite" the following as witnesses:

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, Samuel J. Foley, the Bronx district attorney who handled proceedings before a grand jury that twice failed to indict Flynn in the "paving block scandal"; William B. Herlands, New York commissioner of investigations who also probed the "scandal;" Daniel Daley, foreman of the grand jury who subsequent to Flynn's exoneration obtained a position with the War Department; Paul J. Kern, former president of the New York Civil Service Commission, who initiated the charge that Flynn caused the yard of his country home to be paved with blocks at city expense, and Robert Moran, former public works commissioner in the Bronx, who sent city paving blocks and city workmen to the Flynn home at Carmel, N. Y.

Connally said that the committee "insisted" that the witnesses be asked to appear before the com-

Mercury Due To Dip to 15, Then Rebound

Skaters' Hopes Dashed; Cleaners Struggle With Street Debris

With the cold wave expected to hit a new low of 15 degrees before morning, the Weather Bureau yesterday dashed fond hopes of would-be ice skaters by predicting "much warmer" weather today.

The temperature rose to 30 degrees yesterday, and without the buffeting wind of Tuesday the day seemed much warmer than its predecessor.

Meanwhile, Washington cleaned up the debris left behind the gale that swept the city Tuesday and brought the sudden cold snap. Trees, branches, twigs, leaves, portions of roofs, broken glass from light standards, and paper, comprised the bulk of the residue from the riotous winds, and the District Sanitary Department was hard at it yesterday attempting to catch up.

William A. Xanten, superintendent of the Sanitary Department, said the blow had set his force a week behind in its work. And the department, he lamented, was just catching up from the sand thrown on the city's icy streets after the snow of 10 days ago.

The park police, swamped with calls from ice skaters, repeatedly measured the ice on the Reflecting Pool, but late yesterday found it less than a quarter-inch thick. Some portions still were not frozen over. The Weather Bureau said the slow freezing was due to the unseasonably warm weather of the weekend, which left the water in the pool warm and the ground underneath it still radiating some heat.

Middle West Cold Takes Death Toll

By the Associated Press

Subzero cold that ranged as low as 32 below in Roseau, Minn., frosted a wide expanse of the Middle West yesterday. Deaths attributable to the winter's worst frigid wave were reported from several States. Travelers endured bitter hardship in stalled cars and trains.

Wisconsin counted four cold deaths, Illinois five, Iowa two, and Nebraska one. The cold in Minnesota flooded the fuel oil rationing office with appeals for permission to borrow on future coupons. Numerous cases of frozen feet and hands were reported in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Orderly Rise In Prices Held Inevitable

New OPA Chief Sees 6 Per Cent Increase Over Period of Year

Prentiss Brown, the country's new price administrator, yesterday told reporters that prices cannot be held "at a flat level," but that a "slow well-ordered rise" was inevitable, while former Price Administrator Leon Henderson in his final report to Congress called for "firmness and toughness in the control of prices and incomes."

Brown, former Democratic Senator from Michigan, said that members of the Senate Banking Committee which considered price control legislation had figured on a continual slight rise in prices of about ½ of 1 per cent a month.

(Over a year, this would mean an increase in prices of 6 per cent.)

Some Profits Excessive

Henderson's report asserted that profits in a number of industries "are unquestionably excessive." He stated that studies to make adjustments in such cases are under way.

"So necessary was the expansion of output to our defense in the period prior to December 7, 1941, and to the successful prosecution of the war since that date," Henderson said, "that the office felt impelled to err in the direction of laxity rather than in the direction of rigor.

"For the future, economic stabilization requires a more rigorous policy," he said.

Henderson called for broader rationing, a more vigorous tax program, expanded savings, and "adherence to the line that has now been staked out," to control inflation.

Consumer's Interest First

The report was viewed as presenting an analysis of the problems faced by Brown and the course of action which Henderson would follow under the circumstances. Brown, who piloted the two price control measures through Congress, was schooled in the problems of inflation control by Henderson at that time.

Brown opened his initial press conference within an hour after he took the oath of office with the statement that he planned to spend the next two weeks studying OPA regulations and meeting OPA officials before discussing personnel

2 Million Dollar Request

Sabath to Ask NHA Funds For Housing Congressmen

When the House convenes today Representative Sabath, veteran Democrat from Illinois, will introduce a resolution directing the National Housing Administration to take two million dollars out of public housing funds and build two new apartment houses for the use of members of Congress, their families and their employes.

The buildings are to be located "within a reasonable distance of the Capitol," and the Congressmen are perfectly willing to pay rents which would be fixed by the Architect of the Capitol.

The tale behind this simple little resolution is a sad one, indeed. It is outlined in the measure itself and Representative Sabath expanded on it at some length in a statement to the press.

It seems that the legislators like most other people have a hard time finding a place to live here, and many "find it impossible to lease decent living quarters." Some of them even have to leave their families back home, and when accommodations are found, they have to spend a lot of time going to and from work.

"This situation," says the resolution with a flourish of whereases "greatly detracts from their ability to perform their duties efficiently."

(Last session the House flatly refused for months to appropriate money for family housing construction here, asserting that Washington-bound war workers ought to leave their families at home.)

"Gasoline and tire restrictions," Sabath observed further, "have tended to further delay members and employes reaching their offices."

When hearings were held on the national defense housing appropriation two years ago, he added, Congress was told that some new quarters would be made available for members at the Friendship development. However, he complained, these quarters were never forthcoming, nor was any provision ever made for ill-housed Congressmen.

3000 Miners End Strike, 9000 Still Out

2 Locals Respond To Roosevelt Order; Union to Drop Those Who Refuse Work

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 20 (AP).—Stomping, shouting miners launched a new back-to-work movement in Pennsylvania's strike-bound hard coal fields tonight.

Cries of "back to work, boys" rang through union halls as more than 4000 workers voted to comply with President Roosevelt's order that they end their three-week-old unauthorized walkout by noon tomorrow.

Throwing parliamentary order to the winds, the 1800 employes of the Lehigh Valley Coal Co.'s Prospect-Henry colliery didn't even bother to take a formal vote. In a 5-minute session they yelled unanimous approval when one worker called out, "What do we want a meeting for? Let's go back to work!"

Follows Roosevelt's Move

They were the first to make such a decision since Mr. Roosevelt issued his ultimatum yesterday and warned that he would "take the necessary steps" unless the miners obeyed.

More formal but just as determined was the Lance Colliery Local of Glen Alden Coal Co., with 1000 members. They voted 250 to 110 to resume production tomorrow.

The big south Wilkes-Barre local, representing 1400 employes of the Glen Alden Co., tonight joined the movement, ratifying a back-to-work vote taken Monday. Hugh Cavanaugh, a member of the mine committee, predicted that operations would be resumed tomorrow at 85 per cent of normal.

However two smaller locals, the Exeter of the Payne Coal Co., and Westmoreland, of the Lehigh Coal Co., each with 800 members voted to continue the walkout. Altogether about 9000 still were idle.

No mention was made at the meetings of the Lance and Prospect Henry locals of their demands—that a 50-cents-a-month increase in union dues be rescinded and that they be granted a flat wage increase of $2 a day.

Other Developments

The voting followed these other developments:

1. The executive committee of the United Mine Workers District 1, in which all of the strike-closed mines are located, warned that all strikers who defied the President's order would face "dishonorable expulsion forthwith" from the union. Under the union's closed shop contract with the operators, an expelled member is barred from the mines.

2. Gov. Edward Martin, at his first press conference since his inauguration yesterday, called on the miners "as loyal citizens" to end the strike and asserted that the State of Pennsylvania would do

Axis Reported Quitting Tripoli; Red Army Gains on Kharkov; 77 Children Die In London Raid

Enemy Rolled Back To '42 Line in Area; Russians Approach Salsk in Caucasus

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 20.—The Red army, driving deeply into the Ukraine, gained 17 miles in the sweep toward Kharkov, and farther south reached a point only 45 miles above Voroshilovgrad, Donets River industrial center, a special communique announced tonight.

The Russians now have rolled back the German to an area where the resilient Red army itself had retreated last summer when the big Nazi drive began.

(The midnight Soviet communique heard by the Soviet monitor in London said the Russians had captured Mityakinskaya, only 22 air line miles east of Voroshilovgrad, a junction on a network of railways that winds down to Rostov. Thus the Russians not only were closing in on the important base of Rostov from three sides, but might aim to sweep around it to anchor their flying columns on the Sea of Azov behind it.)

Near Salsk in Caucasus

In the Caucasus the Russians now were near Salsk, big rail junction 100 miles below Rostov.

(British military observers said the Russians in two months had rendered ineffective a total of 89 Axis divisions, representing the demoralization of some 1,335,000 enemy troops if they were at full divisional strength.)

The southern arm of the Russian sweep toward Kharkov captured Byelokurakina, 115 miles southest of the big industrial center. A northern army is fighting within 79 miles of the city from the east.

Byelokurakina was taken by Soviet troops dvancing 17 miles from Novo-Pskov. Farther south another column took Byelovodsk, 45 miles above Voroshilovgrad. Other Russian units were threatening Voroshilovgrad in a drive down the railway from Millerovo.

Axis Stronghold Taken

The northern arm is fighting beyond the Urazovo area on the Voronezh-Kupyansk-Kharkov railway. Seventy miles northeast of this Russian spearhead the Red army finally smashed a two-day Axis stand in encircled Ostrogozhsk. Two railway trains loaded with motor vehicles and other equipment fell along with the city.

In the Caucasus the Red army overran Proletarskaya, about 23 miles from Nazi-held Salsk, a key rail and air base 100 miles southeast of Rostov. It is from Salsk that the Germans have been flying in supplies to the 22 Nazi divisions slowly being throttled to death be-

London Schoolhouse Smashed As Nazis Raid City 5 Times

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Thursday), Jan. 21 (AP).—The German air force stabbed at London four times during the night but indications early today were that the Nazis had done no damage after the furious daylight raid yesterday which smashed a schoolhouse and killed 61 children in the building.

The death toll in the noon raid, all told, was 77 children and 12 women.

Bodies of 31 children and 3 women teachers were taken from the school wreckage, and at least 30 other youngsters were trapped under tons of debris. Twenty-five children were taken to hospitals. Sixteen other children and nine other women were killed in nearby homes.

The showing last night and early today by the Nazi air force was regarded by observers as insignificant as a military operation, for the Germans only reached the outskirts of London once. Otherwise, the four alarms in the London area, one of them in only one section, produced almost no incidents.

Only six raiders eluded London's defenses, but the school, in the heart of a residential section, was smashed into rubble.

There wasn't a chance that the children and three teachers buried in the ruins were alive, for they had been at luncheon on the first floor, but 200 rescue workers kept digging for them.

Only 11 children and one teacher escaped.

Ten other children and six women were killed by a bomb which smashed three London houses, and six children and three women killed when a bomb crashed through the top of a cafe and into a row of houses.

In southern England, where the raiders also delivered destruction, one elderly man died of shock in a southeast coastal town where 40 to 60 planes appeared in two waves,

4600 Planes, 5800 Tanks Sent to Russia

Help Will Grow Still More in 1943, Stettinius Says

The United States and the United Kingdom have sent 5800 tanks and 4600 planes to Russia, the Lend-Lease Administration reported yesterday with a promise that aid to the Soviet "will grow still more in 1943."

Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., said that as of January 1 more than 3200 tanks and almost 2000 planes had gone from the United States and 2600 tanks and more than 2000 planes from the United Kingdom.

Stettinius said the United States had not yet been able "to send as much as we should like—or as much as the Soviet Army needs—and a part of what we send has been lost on the way"—exactly how much he did not say.

"After a slow start, Lend-Lease shipments have greatly increased," he asserted. "They are continuing to increase in spite of the shortage of shipping and enemy attacks along the difficult supply routes to Russia."

Stettinius' statement also reported:

Lend-lease shipments of war supplies to Russia reached a new high in November, equaling 13 times the total sent in January, 1942.

As of January 1, the United States had shipped to Russia under lend-lease more than 3200 tanks and almost 2600 planes.

Tank shipments to Russia were greater under lend-lease than to any other country since the beginning of the program in March, 1941, although lend-lease aid to Russia did not begin until eight months later.

Plane shipments to Russia exceeded shipments to the United Kingdom or to any other military theater under lend-lease. In addition to tanks and planes, United States shipments to Russia included 81,000 trucks, jeeps and other military motor vehicles.

Drive to Clear Guadalcanal Begun by U. S.

1032 Japs Killed In 5 Days as Push Gets Under Way

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Military and naval officials said yesterday that a strong drive aimed at crushing the Japanese forces on Guadalcanal was under way and forecast that the elimination of effective enemy resistance there would not be long delayed.

Success of the new offensive was shown in a communique which reported that 1032 Japanese had been killed in fighting on the island during the five-day period, January 12 to January 16. This is a heavy toll, considering the size of the forces involved.

For the past several days the Navy has reported continuing fighting ashore, with periodic reports of American advances. Before that there had been a long lull in land fighting on Guadalcanal.

Until yesterday, however, there had been no indication whether or not the fighting had been heavy or as to the American objective. Some officials, on the basis of reports received, thought the United States

Hull Defends Policy

Peyrouton to Shift Officials In African Administration

Hull Decries Critics Of African Actions; Cites Military Task

By Hugo Speck
International News Service Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull yesterday described the military situation in North Africa as critical but expressed complete confidence in the ability of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to handle the multitudinous problems with which the American commander is faced.

In one of his rare displays of anger, the Secretary referred to the seriousness of the military situation in a strong condemnation of all persons, factions and organizations who continually persist in placing inconsequential details and events before military expediency.

Specifically, he was asked during a press conference if the State Department had followed through on the request made by President Roosevelt last November 17 that all Nazi inspired laws and decrees in force in North Africa be immediately abrogated.

Using a sharp, unmistkably irritated tone, Hull first declared that he wished people could get their minds on the war at least a few minutes each day. He said he had complete confidence in General Eisenhower and those in charge in North Africa, adding that the general has competent generals and others among his advisers.

Emphasizing that the State Department is attempting to cooperate with the military authorities in every way in the prosecution of the war the Secretary said the

Ex-Collaborationist Takes Over Helm In Algeria

Algiers, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Marcel Peyrouton, former Vichy Interior Minister, took over the Governor Generalship of Algeria today and in his first public statement announced that changes will be made in the local North Africa administration.

He intimated to American and British correspondents, however, that the changes would be made gradually.

An agreement between High Commissioner Gen. Henri Honore Giraud and Gen. Charles de Gaulle of the Fighting French is necessary to French unity, he said, and, in the long run, to the Allied military effort in North Africa.

Peyrouton said he would work closely with the Allied command, which informants here insisted had given its official blessing to his appointment.

He said he offered his services to Giraud and believes his background in North African affairs would be of considerable help to the Allied cause. He has served previously as secretary-general of French Algeria, resident-general and high commissioner of Morocco and resident-general of Tunisia.

Peyrouton also called attention to the fact that he signed papers calling for the arrest of Pierre Laval in December, 1940, thereby preventing a collaborationist coup, and that he resigned as Vichy Ambassador to Argentina when Laval returned to power.

(Peyrouton resigned when Laval, already chief of government, made

Argentina Holds Out Alone

Hull Calls Chile's Axis Break Contribution to Security

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Shortly after Chile, one of the foremost nations of Latin America, broke off diplomatic relations with the Axis powers yesterday, Secretary of State Hull welcomed her action as "an important contribution to the security of the continent."

Of the 21 republics in the Western Hemisphere, Argentina is now the only one that has not declared war on the Axis powers or broken off relations with them.

The line-up is as follows:

Republics that have declared war—United States, Brazil, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, and Panama.

Republics that have broken off relations without declaring war—Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

In Argentina there is a great deal of sentiment among the people for a break with the Axis. Some observers have estimated that 80 per cent of the people would vote for a break. However, the conservative government headed by President Ramon Castillo has taken the position that it is in Argentina's interests to remain neutral, and there have been no indications that the Castillo government will retreat from that stand.

Secretary Hull's statement on Chile's action in severing relations with Germany, Italy and Japan follows:

"I have just been informed by the Chilean Ambassador of the decision of the Chilean government to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis powers. I welcome this action as an important contribution to the security of the continent.

"In a larger sense, however, the government of Chile has taken a step which once more confirms the identity of the ideals and aspirations of the Chilean people with

BULLETIN

Cairo, Jan. 21 (Thursday) (INS). By land and sea Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's crumbling Afrika Korps was evacuating Tripoli today, late front dispatches said, but American and British planes were converting the enemy's attempted escape to Tunisia into a blazing shambles.

Fliers both east and west Allied bombers and fighters were smashing continuously at ships and port facilities of Tripoli harbor and lining the road west of the Tripolitanian capital with miles of flaming junk, as British Eighth Army vanguards stabbed into the city's near approaches.

By Alfred E. Wall
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 20.—Twin British columns, now within 40 and 60 miles of Tripoli, were surging down upon that burning capital of Mussolini's tottering Libya tonight amid strong indications that the Axis defense of the city would be only a delaying action.

[According to the United Press, unofficial reports said the vanguard of the British Eighth Army had pierced the outskirts of Tripoli, the city itself was in flames and Marshal Rommel was starting to evacuate his troops by sea.

[The Morocco radio, the United Press also reported that Rommel already was loading his men aboard ships in the wreckage-littered Tripoli harbor in an apparent attempt to evacuate them to southeast Tunisian ports.]

10 Sunk Off Tunisia

To the northwest, in Tunisia, Axis tank forces pushed forward 7 miles into French-held positions southwest of Pont du Fahs in an apparent move to take pressure off Marshal Rommel's retreat into Tunisia to join forces with Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim.

In the relentless battle of supply at sea the Admiralty announced that 14 enemy vessels were destroyed in the central part of the Mediterranean during the first three days of this week without loss or damage to the Royal Navy.

A triumphant communique disclosed that a pack of destroyers, 6 British and 1 Greek, sank these vessels on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights without damage or loss:

Chile Seizes Axis Nationals After Break

By the Associated Press

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 20.—Chile severed relations with the Axis powers today, and President Juan Antonio Rios told his people in a broadcast tonight that it was a step toward continental solidarity and in defense of democracy.

Rios explained the rupture with Germany, Japan and Italy in a half-hour address from the government palace.

The Chilean Senate approved the decision last night by a 30-to-10 vote, and Rios afterward signed the decree to oust Axis diplomats. A roundup of all Axis nationals was quickly begun.

Tonight Rios gave Chileans the full explanation of his decision, reached long after the original popular protest against Axis attacks on Chilean shipping had subsided.

It was not known immediately whether the diplomats would remain in Chile until an exchange could be arranged or whether they would be transferred to Argentina, which now is the only American nation maintaining diplomatic relations with the Axis.)

those free peoples everywhere in this great struggle.

"I know that I express the feeling of my fellow citizens in extending the heartiest good wishes on this occasion to the government and people of a traditionally friendly country. Chile has now taken its place with the 20 American republics which have given official and practical expression to their realization of the nature of the Axis menace."

Ambassador Rodolfo Michels earlier called at the State Department and formally notified Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles of the action taken.

Leaving Welles' office after a 25-minute visit, Ambassador Michels told reporters:

"Since the attack on Pearl Harbor my government has given full cooperation in the movement for continental solidarity and for democratic principles, and this new step is a new measure to reinforce that cooperation in the cause of the democracies."

Hull Hits Critics Of African Policy

United States Government is paying more attention to that phase of the situation than it is to political, social, factual and a thousand other problems behind the lines.

With studied sarcasm he added that he believed that now and then people should not fail to overlook the seriousness of the military situation, especially when it is so critical.

Regarding the appointment of Marcel Peyrouton, former Vichy Minister of Interior to succeed Yves Chatel as governor-general of Algeria, the Secretary declared that question concerned the War Department. Primarily, he said, it concerns the military situation and that whatever facts are available on his appointment would come from the War Department.

Further, a British submarine chased an enemy supply ship for 5 hours and sent her down off the Tunisian coast. This same submersible also drove ashore two small supply ships, both burning.

The destruction of these ships swept Mussolini's "Mare Nostrum" virtually clean from the Tunisian coast to Sardinia.

Absence of opposition at sea was taken to indicate there was little probability of the Axis attempting to evacuate its forces from Tripolitania and Tunisia. Thus these would face a squeeze between the advancing Eighth Army and the Allied forces in Tunisia.

Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery's troops advanced yesterday more than 25 miles along the coastal road to the Homs area, 60 miles east of Tripoli, while a companion spearhead of the Eighth Army swept in on Tarhuna, 40 miles from Tripoli.

Reuters reported the Axis radio station broadcasting under the false name of "Radio Brazzaville" had announced British troops were in the suburbs of Tripoli, but this was unconfirmed. London quarters said they had no information to show that the British were even as close as 30 miles to Tripoli, as reported from Cairo last night.

That Rommel was not defending Tarhuna was clearly indicated.

Brig. Gen. Jaques Leclerc, Fighting French leader who has swept up from the Lake Chad area, announced that his troops under command of Colonel Ingold "are attacking to the left of the British Eighth Army and have advanced northward."

The Fighting French columns, it was revealed tonight, have established contact with the British Eighth Army and have joined the advance on Tripoli.

A broadcast communique said:

"Following the brilliant success which gained us all the immense territory of the Fezzan, the Fighting French forces of Colonel Ingold (the field commander) are continuing their advance northward and have established contact with the British Eighth Army.

"These forces are brilliantly taking part with their British allies in the advance on Tripoli. They are attacking on the left of the Eighth Army moving northward."

The Eighth Army menacing Tripoli itself has gathered such momentum that observers here believed it would sweep through the city before Rommel could organize a real defense, then rush on to Tunisia to launch a simultaneous, all-out attack with the First Army.

Reports from Allied headquarters in North Africa said military sources considered it likely that Rommel intended to establish himself behind the "Mareth Line," a west side of the road running bestrip of fortified highlands just inside southern Tunisia.

In the Pont du Fahs area of Tunisia the German tank column under its new commander, Gen. Von Arnim, shoved forward along the road from Pont du Fahs southwest toward Robaa, about 28 miles away.

To the north of Pont du Fahs, a spokesman at Allied headquarters in North Africa said, "Every Axis soldier who has advanced to the tween Bou Arada and Goubellat" has been cleared out.

"We hold the high ground to the southeast of Bou Arada," he said.

drive might be one of limited aims.

Now, however, informed sources declare the objective is to crush effective Japanese resistance on Guadalcanal as quickly as possible. The American attacks apparently are heavy and are meeting with success, they state.

Within Month, Maybe

Some observers now are predicting that the island will be largely cleaned up within a month, though in the light of the stubborn opposition of the isolated Jap forces in eastern New Guinea this may be too optimistic.

Due to Guadalcanal's rugged terrain the elimination of all of the Japanese on the island would probably take months. Small units, conserving their ammunition and living on coconuts and bamboo shoots, probably could hold out indefinitely.

The immediate task of the American forces is to wipe the major pockets of enemy resistance still entrenched on the western end of the island. Qualified observers here hope this can be done in a month or so.

It is estimated that there are now some 15,000 Japs on Guadalcanal, largely pocketed in strong points along the beach and mountain slopes in the western part of the northern coast of the island. They lack equipment, though probably not ammunition, and are believed to be weakened from very short rations. American forces on the island are well equipped and considerably outnumber the enemy, it was said.

Crushing of the Japs now on Guadalcanal would make Henderson Field secure and permit this important air base to be expanded. Then, stronger air attacks could be made against enemy bases in the upper Solomons and New Britain, and sooner or later expeditionary forces could be launched at those islands with reasonable prospects of capturing them.

Jap Offensive Possible

Meanwhile, however, a major Japanese offensive aimed at recapturing Guadalcanal is by no means out of the question. Its chances of success, however, would be much less than those attempted last fall which were badly punished.

The latest announced enemy casualties raised to 8022 the total of Japs killed in fighting in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area since our capture of the islands last August. This includes only Nipponese bodies counted after land battles and not undoubtedly thousands more destroyed by bombs and shells within the enemy lines. Nor does it include tens of thousands lost at sea during attempts to reinforce the Jap forces on Guadalcanal.

Text of Communique

Text of yesterday's communique, No. 256, follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are east longitude.)

"On January 18, during the afternoon, a force of 'Flying Fortress' heavy bombers (Boeing B-17), with fighter escort, bombed a Japanese cargo ship which was anchored in the Shortland Island area. Two hits were scored on the vessel which was left burning.

"Two enemy float type 'Zeros' were shot down and one of our fighters failed to return.

"During the period from January 13 to January 17 inclusive, 1032 Japanese were killed in the various actions between United States and enemy forces on Guadalcanal Island."

Peyrouton Affair Irks Fighting French

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 20.—Obviously stirred by Marcel Peyrouton's appointment as Governor-General of Algeria, the French National Committee met in a special session today, and Fighting French headquarters declared the appointment would shock the French people as much or more than did the agreement with the late Admiral Jean Darlan.

Fighting French circles scoffed at what they termed an Algiers propaganda campaign seeking to build up the Peyrouton appointment as a step toward an agreement between Gen. Henri Giraud and Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The appointment has further pushed into the background the possibility of a meeting soon of the two French leaders, one reliable source said.

Condensed Milk May Be Rationed

Is Included in List of Processed Foods Turned Over to OPA by Wickard

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has signed an order delegating authority to the Office of Price Administration to ration evaporated and condensed milk, jams, jellies, preserves, fruit butters, pickles, relishes, processed fish and shell fish and food products which contain meats.

Wickard, acting in the capacity of food administrator, had previously announced that the OPA had been directed to ration canned and bottled fruits and fruit juices, canned and bottled vegetables and vegetable juices, canned soups, dried and dehydrated fruits and frozen fruits and vegetables. These products are scheduled to be rationed under a point system late next Monday.

An order delegating authority to the OPA to ration the processed fruits and vegetables also included the other commodities.

The order was published in the Federal Register, official publication containing orders and regulations issued by the various administrative agencies of the Government. This was the first notice that the list of products to be rationed had been enlarged. The department omitted the usual procedure of making an official announcement.

Officials said condensed and evaporated milk would not be included in the initial rationing of canned foods. They said canned milk, fish and other items had been added to the rationing order to "facilitate administrative preparations for rationing of the items if necessary at a future date."

The OPA, officials explained, has not yet been actually directed to ration foods other than processed fruits, vegetables, juices, soups and baby foods.

They said, however, that supplies of evaporated milk and fish were expected to be below consumer requirements this year. Short suppliesof sugar, which already is being rationed, and of fruit juices can be expected, they said, to affect the production of jams, preserves and fruit butters.

or policy.

"I feel I am placed here to look after the interest of the American consumer," Brown said. "While doing full justice to the producer, I feel that the directive which Congress has given us is to protect the consuming public. I hope to satisfy the American people and Congress as far as those groups can be satisfied. I think the President wants me to make it plain to the American people why we do the things we do."

"The keynote of rationing and price control is not to have them looked upon as an imposition, but as a protection."

Asked about reports that he planned to appoint former Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat) of Iowa as his director of personnel, Brown said, "I am not prepared to discuss the Herring matter today."

He said that he would hold "open house" during the rest of the week for Congressmen and Senators who have been his friends and then get down to learning about his organization of 47,000 employes.

The new price administrator revealed that he "regretted such things as not being able to drive your cars," and that up until four months ago, he regarded the imposition of Nation-wide gasoline rationing as unnecessary, although he acknowledged a need for it at present.

As for pleasure driving, he said that if he found no legal basis for the present ban, he would "follow the law." He added that he was going to miss driving into Virginia and Maryland for recreation.

He promised to devote close attention to the fuel oil supply situation, "to make every effort to prepare for the coming fall and winter." He expressed the belief that more oil could be brought into the East over the Great Lakes during the summer months.

Brown disclosed that he has spent considerable time interviewing storekeepers on the effects of rationing and price control and has been "surprised" to find rather general acceptance of the measures.

Henderson, in his report, scouted as "without foundation," the "frequently made claim" that price control is eliminating small business.

"While in the case of individual firms here and there, and the case of individual items for some firms, price regulation has worked some hardship, it may be said flatly that business, small as well as large, is in a better position today than at any previous time," Henderson said.

"This proposition is supported not only by the profit record, but also by the facts on business mortality. Business mortality has declined substantially since the outbreak of the war."

Henderson warned that the "honeymoon" period of business expansion "which has lifted profits far above normal peacetime levels has come to an end and that ahead lie increasing difficulties."

The favorable profit picture "has provided industry with an ample cushion to absorb these pressures within the framework of stable prices," Henderson said.

Henderson said that problems of the year ahead—problems which Brown will have to meet—will "dwarf" those of the past year. Supplies available for civilian consumption will be "savagely" reduced, with peak mobilization for war attained "with inevitable strain and pressure throughout the economy."

He called for a more vigorous tax program "supplemented by an unprecedented expansion of savings."

"There must be firmness and toughness in the control of prices and incomes," Henderson said. "There must be a broadening of the rationing program until all essential goods which are in short supply are equitably distributed.

"These are requirements which impose severe demands upon all. But they must be met, and they can be met. Inflation can be held in check if we, as a united country, adhere to the line that has now been staked out."

U. S. Planes Blast Way for British Push on Akyab

New Delhi, Jan. 20 (U.P.).—British troops advancing down the northwestern coast of Burma toward the port of Akyab are meeting strong Japanese resistance but American and British planes, continuing their daily assaults, have made new raids against widespread areas of Burma, it was announced today.

A joint British air and ground commands communique said that "no important changes" were reported from the ground front about 25 miles up the coast from Akyab.

An American communique announced that United States heavy bombers yesterday bombed the docks at Bassein, 90 miles west of Rangoon, and strafed installations at Kanaing.

(Kanaing does not appear on available maps but there is a Kanaung which is 135 miles northeast of Bassein.)

Allies Reduce Japanese Hold In Sanananda

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), Jan. 21 (AP).—American and Australian ground troops, hacking at isolated pockets of Jap resistance, further reduced the slender enemy hold in the Sanananda sector of New Guinea, while Allied bombers raided 10 enemy points, the noon communique reported today.

Previous accounts had told of two pockets of Japs on the coast in the vicinity of Sanananda Point and two others inland.

The jetty at Dobo in the Aroe Islands was raided and one of three Jap float planes which attempted to intercept probably was damaged. At Ambon in the same sector, a Jap fighter was shot down by a bomber.

Jap localities at Lauten in Portuguese Timor were bombed and near Juijoro one of five Jap fighters trying to intercept was damaged. Along the coast of the Willaumez Peninsula in New Britain, three barges were strafed and these had to be beached.

Job Agency Probe Extension Likely

The House Rules Committee yesterday approved a resolution extending into the new Congress the investigation of United States employment practices launched last session by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia chairman of the Civil Service Committee. It is expected that the resolution will be called up on the floor for consideration today.

Welcome Your Block Leader When She Calls on You This Week in the Blood Donor Campaign!

The campaign is for the purpose of securing volunteer blood donors to complete the Civilian Defense Blood Plasma Bank, so that Washington will have adequate supply in event of air raid or any emergency of the civilian population.

The Blood Donor Campaign is sponsored by the Emergency Medical Services of OCD, under the direction of Dr. John A. Reed. Block leaders will secure the names of persons wishing to volunteer blood donations, and the Emergency Medical Services office will contact these volunteers and make specific appointments for their donations at cooperating hospitals.

"In the event of major catastrophe, blood plasma has proven to be the best agent to save lives," says Dr. Reed. "This has been ably demonstrated in the Boston city fire of recent date, as well as in the military disaster at Pearl Harbor."

The Block Leader will also carry information regarding the blood bank sponsored by the Red Cross, and persons wishing to give blood for military purposes will be referred by Dr. Reed to the Red Cross for follow-up appointments.

A donation of blood to the bank may be the means of saving the life of one of your loved ones, your neighbors, or your fellow citizens.

Your block leader brings you accurate and important facts on war services, and on how you, as a civilian, can help in the war effort. She is chosen for her qualities of leadership, responsibility, and her ability to meet people. The Block Leader Corps—formerly the Victory Volunteers—is still incomplete. If you are willing to visit 20 of your neighbors to enlist their help on the home front, contact your Area Chairman, or call Civilian Mobilization Headquarters, NAtional 6000, br. 2830, 2832 or 2837.

LaGuardia, 5 Others Called to Testify on Flynn's Political Past; President's Choice Denies Charges

mittee at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

He added that these witnesses would be "all for the moment," but that more might be called later, including Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., who, as one of Flynn's successors to the position of New York City chamberlain, investigated and reported disparagingly on the conduct of his predecessors in investing public funds in the State Title and Mortgage Co.

Much, it was generally agreed, depends on the testimony of these witnesses. If they support sweeping charges made in the Senate against Flynn by Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, the diplomatic career of "the boss" may die in its earliest infancy. If not, Flynn last night appeared an odds-on shot for confirmation with the vote in the committee and, later, on the floor of the Senate, largely along party lines.

Connally said that the witnesses would be asked to appear on a "voluntary basis." It will be up to the committee, added the Senator, to determine whether it will be necessary for it to exercise its power of subpena to learn the truth about many-faceted history of a man whose life has been Tammany politics for 26 years.

Instances Cited

Sydney S. Baron, a "public relations counsel" from Brooklyn—"publicity is public enlightenment"—cited three instances to the committee when, he charged, Flynn committed perjury in defending himself. As a matter of fact, he declared, the whole of Flynn's defense was perjured, and he assured the committee that it would demonstrate this to its own satisfaction if it would but summon for questioning some 25 persons whose names he offered as witneses. But on these allegedly perjured parts of Flynn's testimony he was specific:

1. Flynn did not tell the truth, Baron stated, when he explained that his appointment of the late and notorious Arthur Flegenheimer, alias Dutch Schultz, as "special" deputy sheriff in the Bronx had no more significance than the naming of a "colonel" in Kentucky.

2. Neither was the resigned Democratic national chairman truthful, he charged, when he asserted that Berle's unflattering report on the conduct of city officials in the investment of public trust funds did not involve Flynn.

Branded as False

3. No less false, asserted Baron, was Flynn's contenton that he was completely unaware that New York City was furnishing labor and materials for the paving of what Flynn called an automobile parking area and what the newspapers called a "Belgian courtyard" at his country home in November, 1940.

"Edward J. Flynn knew about it all the time," proclaimed Baron on the paving block "scandal." If the committee was interested, he went on, all it has to do is to summon as witnesses the workmen who laid the blocks. He said the committee would learn that Flynn not only saw the men at work, spoke to them, but, from one of the men, it would be able to obtain testimony to the effect that he knew Flynn and that Flynn knew him.

Both Flynn and his law partner for 20 years, Monroe Goldwater of New York, asserted that Flynn was completely oblivious to the source of his paving blocks and labor. When Flynn found out about it, he was "astounded, surprised, aggravated and distressed" and "naturally swore," said Goldwater. Goldwater said that as soon as he was apprised of the circumstances, he immediately made certain that the workmen were paid at the rate of $14 a day, that restitution was made for the cost of the blocks ($80) and for the city gasoline and oil that was used in transporting the workers to Carmel in two city-owned station wagons.

Didn't Expect Pay

The workmen, asserted Baron, "never expected to be paid by Flynn, but did expect that they would be able to get a drink of water (at the Flynn country home) and, perhaps, a little lunch." Goldwater told the committee that the workers, he assumed, were "on vacation" and that they were "in a way," receiving their regular city salaries.

This circumstance caused Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, to observe: "It seems that the city got nothing and the men were paid twice."

Goldwater is a dark-haired, sharp-nosed lawyer with obvious professional talent. Baron has black wavy hair and a black mustache. He's 30 years old and palpably considers such things as "direct testimony" so much legalistic nonsense. The committee followed Goldwater's testimony with deeper appreciation than it accorded the statements of Baron. But the crowd liked Baron.

Crowd Applauds

It clapped and laughed when he said: "When these charges are heard, Mr. Flynn will very gladly go to Australia and hide in the pouch of a kangaroo."

This caused Flynn to laugh, and deepened the pink of his face to scarlet.

Baron delivered to the committee what he called the "taxpayers' case against Edward J. Flynn." But it was not a lawyer's case and much of what he had to say about the Flynn charges he was unable to support from his own knowledge.

Over the ex parte nature of his testimony he clashed once with Chairman Connally and again with Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky.

Affidavit Introduced

Baron called the committee's attention to an affidavit made by George H. Coburn, one of the paving block grand jurors, who, subsequent to the jury's failure to indict Flynn, charged that the district attorney, Foley, had instructed the jury that no criminal offense had been committeed as long as Flynn had made restitution.

Connally wanted to know why Baron or members of the Committee to Reopen the Flynn Case, of which he is executive secretary, had not obtained affidavits from more than one of the 23 jurors.

"Mr. Connally, like Mr. Foley, is apparently the defense attorney here and is interested in preventing me from making a comprehensive case."

"The chairman is going to run this committee and not you," said Connally.

Questions for LaGuardia

LaGuardia was on the list of witnesses whom Baron wanted the committee to summon. He said: "Ask LaGuardia if he did not say on three different occasions that compared with Ed Flynn, Boss Twee dwas just an amateur." The crowd liked that one, too.

Members of the committee exhibited a lively interest in Baron's profession of public relations counsel. Senator Connally asked him twice what his profession was and then asked him to tell him what it meant.

"Molding and interpreting public opinion," came the response.

Connally wondered if he was practicing his profession before the committee. Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana remarked that "publicity" to Baron appeared to be "one of the biggest assets."

The hearing was opened with the Oxfordian accents of G. Howland Shaw, an Assistant Secretary of State in charge of personnel, who came before the committee on the instructions of Secretary Cordell Hull.

Qualities Cited

As a qualification of Flynn for high diplomatic post, he cited the fact that: "Mr. Flynn served with success as commissioner for the Federal Government to the recent World Fair in New York, where it was part of his function to meet and in numerous ways to cooperate with similar representatives from other nations in matters pertaining to their mutual commercial and related interests."

The statement pointed out that Flynn's appointment was made by President Roosevelt who, "of course, gives his personal attention to nominations for the diplomatic service." As for the State Department, the statement went on, it "knows and recognizes" Flynn as a "person of ability" and "of intelligence and of professional educational training both here and abroad," and "that he has held many public offices and that he knows people and knows how to get along with people.

Under cross-examination by Senator Bridges, who is not a member of the committee but who was permitted to interrogate witnesses, Shaw said the statement was "the composite work of several persons and represents the views of the Secretary of State."

"Can't Undertake"

Bridges asked Shaw if he thought the appointment of Flynn measured up to usual State Department standards. Shaw replied: "To make a comparison is something I don't think I can undertake."

Vandenberg asked Shaw if, in his 26 years in the diplomatic service, he ever had known a diplomatic appointee to announce his own appointment, referring to the fact that the first public announcement of Flynn's selection came from Flynn.

Shaw replied that a good part of his career was spent in foreign assignments, that his knowledge of the question was, therefore, limited, and that he was unable to answer "comprehensively."

When Flynn was sworn in as a witness, Senator Connally explained that the oath-taking was customary and "no reflection on you." Flynn took up and denied the charges filed against him by Bridges.

On the charge that Flynn, through his law firm of Goldwater & Flynn, "represented a Mr. Serge Rubinstein, who at the time of his retainer with Flynn, had large Japanese interests," Flynn asserted that he had met Rubenstein only "two or three times," that their conversations invariably were "casual greetings," that they never discussed Rubinstein's law suits and that in the last 2½ years it has been "practically impossible to spend any time in my law office."

Never Asked Favor

Flynn asserted that the firm has "never" sought to utilize his position as head of the Democratic Party by asking for "any consideration" from Federal agencies during Mr. Roosevelt's Administration.

On the subject of whether the appointment of Daley to a Federal job had any connection with Flynn's "whitewash" by the grand jury of which Daley was foreman, Flynn had this to say:

"This is an absolute falsehood as far as I am concerned. I have met Daley, but I doubt that I would know him if he should walk into this room. I never spoke to Mr. Daley about a Federal appointment and I never talked to anyone about his appointment, although I understood that he was applying for a Federal job.

On the subject of Dutch Schultz: "In all the publicity that has been handed out, they have sought to give the impression that this man was appointed a regular deputy sheriff. That is not so."

Little Standing

Flynn testified that "special deputies in the Bronx had about as much official standing as colonels in Kentucky, that they had been appointed by the hundreds in all New York counties, that they were sworn in 20 or more at a time and that the sheriff's office had no facilities for investigating the character of any of the candidates.

Flynn said that Schultz applied under his real name of Flegenheimer which he did not associate with the now dead gangster, and added that six months after Schultz' appointment he was arrested in a raid and his deputy's badge taken from him.

Appointed Sheriff

Baron told the committee, however, that Schultz was appointed just six months after Flynn's term as Bronx sheriff expired, inferring the Schultz' appointment expired automatically. He insisted that Schultz was appointed as a deputy and not as a "special deputy" and that the only distinction between "special" and regular deputies was that the former served without compensation. Baron also made the point that with a deputy's badge it would have been easy for Schultz to obtain a permit to carry a gun.

Vandenberg read into the record a cablegram from Rubinstein to his British attorney, Lord Nathan, dated February 4, 1942: "Have retained Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic Party, and one of the most powerful political figures in America." Goldwater, denied that Flynn had any knowledge of the Rubinstein litigation, and identified Rubinstein's "Japanese interests" as those involved in heading the Chosen Corporation, a British holding company.

JUST SAY . . "CAMERON WORSTED, please."

Yes, gentlemen, it is a bit startling! Particularly if you'd about decided that your kind of suits were going to cost a lot more, this war year of 1943. First off, "Cameron Worsted" is quite a mouthful. Bond customers will tell you that's simply repeating a well-known fact. So—twenty-eight dollars may seem absurdly small for an all-wool suit of such distinguished character. But remember, you're at Bond's—where exceptions are the rule. To prove it, take that saving of $5.50! It's going to jingle in your pocket for two exceptional reasons. First, Bond's direct-selling policy cuts out all wasteful in-between costs. Then, Bond's huge volume levels prices right down to the ground. Without such powerful money-savers, these grand suits might conservatively be $33.50. So go high-hat mister, wear a richly woven Bond Cameron. That important lady in your life is going to love it. What do you say we get together, today or tomorrow?

Flynn Accuser Admits Giving Age High as 21

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 20.—Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16-year-old Hollywood showgirl, admitted today at Errol Flynn's trial on three counts of statutory rape that she had undergone an operation, which the prosecution stipulated was an abortion.

That was one of several sensational bits of information which Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler drew from the girl—chief state complaining witness.

Among the others:

She had been given to understand that, at her request, no action will be taken against the man responsible for her operation.

She has been living, without expense to herself, with policewomen, has been attending movies and visiting hotel cafes. She took a 10-day trip to San Francisco, which she explained was made at the personal expense of the policewoman attending her.

She has stated her age variously up to 21 years in applications for employment at night clubs and in the movies, and carries a driver's license giving her age as 18.

But she denied that:

She once told a girl friend her mother had moved to prosecute Errol Flynn on rape charges against Peggy's wishes because the accusation was untrue.

Her entertainment with policewomen included night clubs or drinking.

In telling of her operation, the girl said a particular man was involved.

"Did you not request the district attorney's office not to prosecute that man?" Giesler asked.

"Yes sir," she replied.

"And did they not promise you that they would not prosecute that man if you would testify in this case?"

"No sir."

"They indicated that they would not prosecute that man?"

"They told me it would not be brought up."

Miss Satterlee admitted she knew the operation was a criminal act, subjecting her to possible prosecution.

It was here Deputy District Attorney Thomas Cochran offered to stipulate that the operation was an abortion.

Of her residence with policewomen, which Miss Satterlee acknowledged started in October, when she was first taken in custody as a Flynn witness, she testified in addition to going to hotel cafes and movies, she had on occasion gone bowling at the beach.

The question of whether she discussed her age with Flynn when he was in a room with her on his yacht occupied Giesler also. He quiered

"You asked him (Flynn) if he knew that you were J. B.—or something? He said he would take his chances, or something of that order?"

"Yes, sir," Miss Satterlee replied.

Giesler read then from her preliminary hearing, in which she said the only time J. B.—which she described as "jail bait" was mentioned was when she first met Flynn, several weeks before the yacht voyage.

The state of her fingernails, her person and the noise of the motors aboard the yacht also came under Giesler's notice.

"Did you scratch Flynn," he asked, "or attempt to?"

"No, sir."

"Did you have any bruises the next morning?"

"No, sir."

In further questioning, Giesler pointed out that she went on deck after the asserted intimacy, yet made no cry toward shore, 70 feet or so away; went ashore the next day but did not stay, returning to the boat where, she charges, Flynn was again intimate with her that night in his own cabin, to which she had followed him.

Commissioners Veto Proposed Public Counsel

In a letter to the House District Committee, the Commissioners yesterday turned thumbs down on a proposal to set up the office of a "people's counsel" here to represent the citizenry in all cases before the Public Utilities Commission.

The proposal had been made by several civic groups throughout the city, and had been forwarded to the Commissioners by Chairman Randolph of the committee.

The city heads declared that such an official would be unnecessary in the municipal organization, pointing out that they themselves were in office for the purpose of representing the Washington populace. They said, moreover, that the P. U. C. was expressly created to watch out for the interests of the public in the matters under its jurisdiction.

They told the committee, moreover, that President Roosevelt when Governor of New York had disapproved the people's counsel idea on exactly this latter point—that utility boards themselves were supposed to guard the people's welfare.

Prospects Dim to Settle Canada's Steel Strike

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Ontario, Jan. 20.—Prospects for quick settlement of a strike which has tied up three of Canada's largest steel plants were dim today as union officials remained cool toward a seven-point settlement plan put forward by the Canadian government.

Officials of the United Steelworkers of America still were in Ottawa although no announcement had been made of any further meetings since the general conference yesterday after which the seven-point proposal was made public.

The U. S. W. A. officials here said in a prepared statement last night that the government had been informed its proposed settlement was unlikely to be accepted by the workers. The government offered to establish a 55-cents-an-hour minimum wage rate, including cost-of-living bonus.

At Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and Sydney, and Trenton, Nova Scotia, officials of the U. S. W. A. indicated the strikers were unlikely to accept the government's plan.

"We'll go back when we get what we asked for—55 cents an hour basic rate plus full cost-of-living bonus," said one official. He said the union was demanding the increase be made retroactive to last March when application for it was made to the Ontario Regional War Labor Board.

In all, 13,500 men are on strike in the plants of the Algoma Steel Corp. at Sault Ste. Marie and the Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. at Sydney and Trenton. The strike is estimated to have halted two-thirds of Canada's wartime steel production.

Fuel Oil, Gas Burned in Md. Train Wreck

By the Associated Press

Hancock, Md., Jan. 20.—Thousands of gallons of precious fuel oil and gasoline bound for the shortage-plagued Eastern Seaboard went up in flames today when nine Western Maryland Railroad tank cars wrecked and burned about a mile west of Hancock.

Railroad officials estimated the loss of fuel oil at 48,000 gallons, or six cars, and the gasoline at 24,000 gallons, or three cars. No one was injured.

The official explanation for the wreck, touching off a fierce fire which blazed for many hours afterward, was that the trucks of the thirty-fourth car of a 121-car train failed as it was passing through a switch. In all, 11 cars were derailed.

The company credited the quick work of crewmen and the efforts of asbestos-clad firefighters, stationed at Hancock for just such an emergency, with holding down the loss. The train included a number of other cars loaded with fuel oil and gasoline.

The scene of the wreck, at Round Top, Md., is inaccessible by road or highway and the Hancock fire department sent in some equipment by rail.

The main line of the Western Maryland was blocked because the cars tore up 300 feet of track and destroyed two automatic signals. Officials said it was expected to be cleared during the night.

The derailed cars also tore down telegraph wires and the railroad's own telephone lines.

Artist Chang Raises $15,000 For China

Prof. Chang Shu-Chi, who honors a venerable tradition, removes with his eye the imperfect things in Nature and substitutes for them the beautiful things he feels. He so paints birds upon delicate, lacy twigs and they almost sing.

CHANG

He is one of China's foremost artists, harmonizer of the divergent Tang and Sung and Yuan and Ming schools, is confident of many things, particularly that art is long, and is phlegmatic to the degree of enduring 18 bombings while rendering 100 exquisite doves upon a scroll in token of President Roosevelt winning a third term.

Professor Chang, in America one year, is now painting at the Arts Club, raising money for his stout countrymen. The walls of one large room are covered with his work. He paints more things, the birds and trees of China, much as they are, something as he wants them to be, and sells them for China. He has sent $15,000 back home.

He remembers China of a year ago. The Chinese were happy, despite everything. Student artists still painted birds and fragile plants. Coffee sold for $10 a cup. And Chang held out a pack of cigarettes with his left hand, while feathering a dove with his right, in a gesture saying they had passed even beyond scarcity.

He painted the 100 doves in Chungking, under commission from Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, completing it in three full days under 18 bombings. It hangs in the White House.

Of Chinese art when the war is finished, he only thinks that art will go on; that some of the students will paint airplanes and bombs, others the slight birds. But, he is sure, "art must go on. It is necessary, everyday. War . . . War . . . War. You would go mad with nothing else," he said, grimacing.

Chang colored an exotic flower and, forgetting all else, smiled.

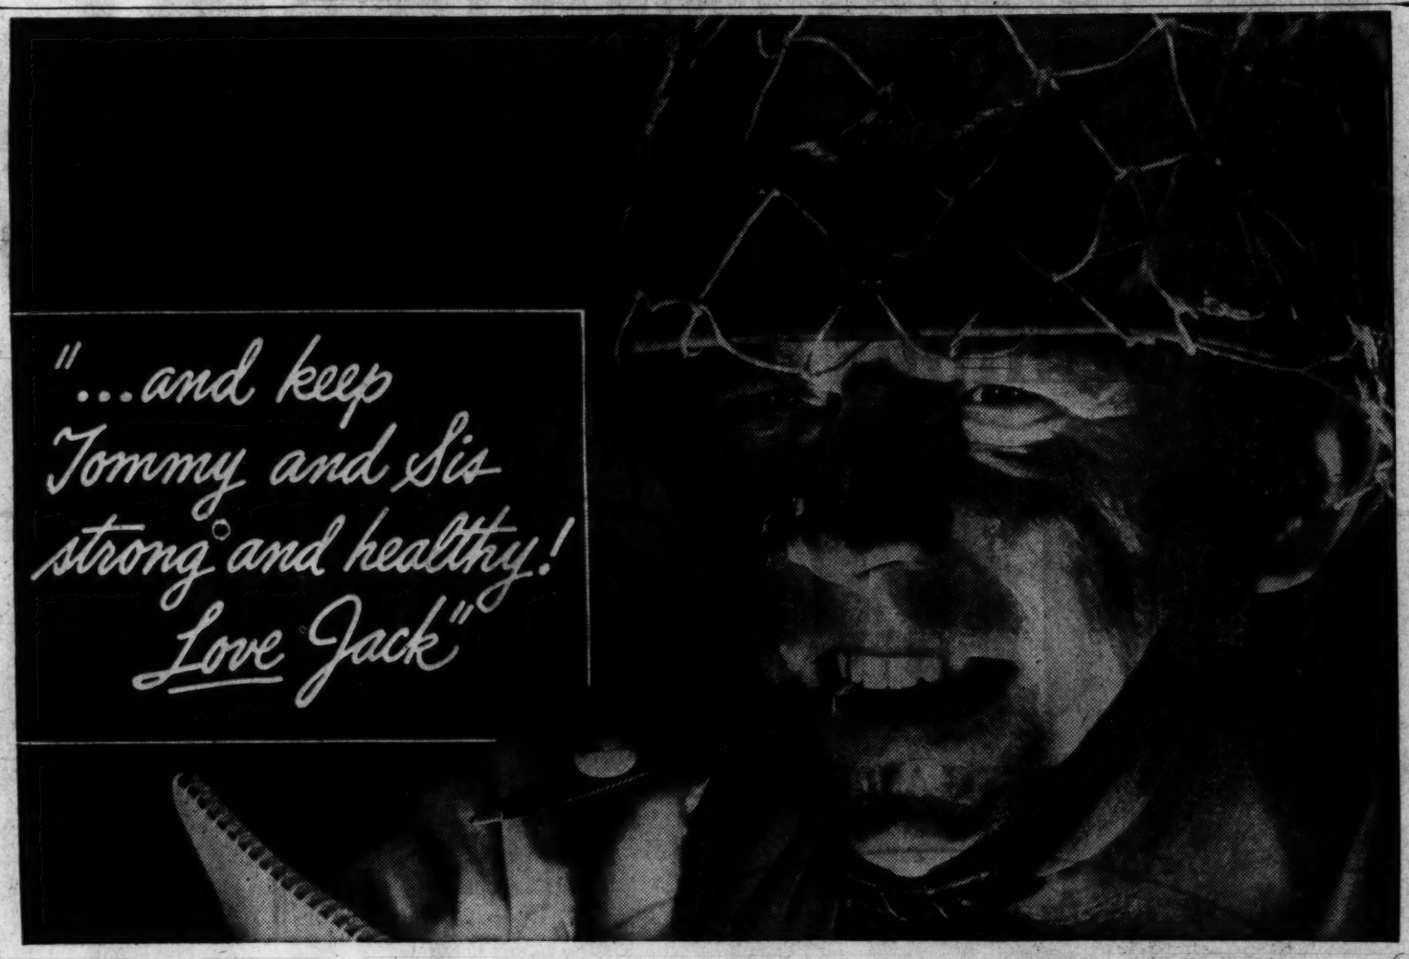
SAVE MEAT WITH TASTY ALL-BRAN MEAT PATTIES

Here's a grand recipe for these times! Delicious, nourishing meat patties—made with KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Makes meat go further. Gives these patties a tempting, crunchy texture—plus all the nutritional benefits of ALL-BRAN: valuable proteins, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals. Try it!

Kellogg's All-Bran Meat Patties

1 egg	1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt	1 cup milk
¼ teaspoon pepper	¼ cup catsup
2 tablespoons minced onion	1 cup Kellogg's All-Bran
	1 pound ground beef

Beat egg, add salt, pepper, onion, parsley, milk, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) about 20 minutes or broil about 15 minutes. Remove meat patties from pan. Add some milk and seasonings to drippings. Thicken slightly to make gravy. Yield: 5 servings, 2 patties each.



Here's the "COMMANDO FRUIT" to protect the ones he's fighting for!

Fresh Florida Grapefruit is loaded with the vitamin crack Commando troops must get every single day. It will do wonders for your children, helping them resist colds, and giving them stamina and strong, healthy blood vessels,

So, Mothers—start now to build everyone in your family as full of rugged red-blooded health as Britain's fighting Commandos! Give them the "Commando Fruit"—fresh Florida grapefruit—every day!

Hear what John Bull has to say about this vitamin C fruit. "Every British Commando MUST have vitamin C, daily. This is an order!"

And here are our own Uncle Sam's fighting words: "The daily diet of every man, woman and child, should include vitamin C, without fail!" This vitamin must be replaced daily—vitamin C is not stored in the body! You need fresh supplies daily—to build healthy blood vessels, firm tissues.

Fortify your whole family—give them Florida grapefruit . . . extra rich in vitamin C—daily. Serve it in salads, fruit cups—drink its juice. You can't buy more health for the money!

How British Submarine Sank 16 Ships in 40,000 Miles of Patrolling

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Delayed).—When Lieut. H. S. Mackenzie, D. S. O., brought H. M. submarine Thrasher back to England for the first time since 1941, he pleaded with reporters with reporters "not to make too umch glamour of it all."

It seemed to newsmen a little glamour was in order. The Thrasher had traveled 40,000 miles on 13 patrols, sunk 16 enemy ships for certain and was manned by the most decorated submarine crew in the British Navy, counting two Victoria crosses, six distinguished service medals, two distinguished service crosses and one distinguished service order.

But since the captain wanted it that way, he was asked to tell his own story. This is the account he gave:

Once, the submarine "unsuccessfully attacked two heavily escorted transports at night, but unfortunately our torpedo tracks were seen.

It Quieted the Rats

"One destroyer passed over us six times in 90 minutes dropping very accurate patterns (of depth charges) each time. The heavy depth charging had a quieting effect on a large number of rats we have on board. They hardly made a squeak for 12 hours. The first officer said he could hear the teeth of one chattering!

"We eventually managed to evade the destroyer and as we were at the end of our patrol all that was left for us was to scoot off home.

"On the same patrol we were nearly rammed by an armed enemy steam tug which we met in the middle of the night. It was a difficult target to see and we dared not illuminate it with a searchlight because we were in enemy waters.

"The crew abandoned it, but it continued a very erratic course at full speed and finished up by missing us by about 10 feet in a valiant effort to ram us. It was near enough for us to fill it with holes and it sank a few minutes later."

Then, in chronological order, he told of the 13 patrols:

"No. 1: In the eastern Mediterranean, nothing very exciting.

"No. 2: Concerned with operations I can't mention.

"No. 3: Two unsuccessful attacks on heavily escorted ships in the Aegean. Later one small supply ship sunk by gunfire.

"No. 4: Directed against supplies to the German army in North Africa. Small supply ship sunk by torpedo at night in the Gulf of Sirte.

"No. 5: Directed against supply lines to North Africa. Shooting not very accurate and one or two valuable targets got away, but a small supply ship was sunk by gunfire. It was carrying petrol and a torpedo frightened the crew into jumping over the side and pulling for the shore as fast as they could. A few rounds sent her up in smoke.

"No. 6: In the Gulf of Taranto. One ship torpedoed and probably sunk; 1942 started fairly successfully and a southbound ship of about 6000 tons was torpedoed. It was the closest attack I have ever done at night. The escort passed about 400 yards ahead.

"No. 7: The patrol when V. C.'s were won by Lieut. S. W. Roberts, the first lieutenant, and Petty Officer T. W. Gould of Dover, the second coxswain. They risked their lives to remove two unexploded bombs dropped by aircraft which had attacked them. To get at one, they crawled 20 feet under the casing covering the hull. Had the submarine been forced to crash dive, both would have been drowned. Thrasher sailed on Friday, the 13th, but it was a lucky day. A medium-sized supply ship was hit by torpedoes and almost certainly sank.

"No. 8: In Gulf of Sirte. A ship in convoy was torpedoed. It sank in about 20 minutes. We sighted a U-boat but were unable to get close enough before it dived. Later we had a short, sharp battle with a heavily armed lighter off the Libyan coast. I think we did more damage to him than he did to us. The shore batteries took part in the fight and we had to dive.

"No. 9: In the Adriatic. We sank one medium-size ship, the only unescorted ship I have seen in the Mediterranean. I was able to see the torpedoes hit—it did not take longer than half a minute to disappear under the water.

"No. 10: In the central Mediterranean and the Gulf of Sirte. We had a fleeting glimpse of the Italian battle fleet scooting for home, but we could not get closer than 7 miles and had no hope of getting a shot. Very disappointed, as it is the only sight of large Italian warships that I have had. We got one ship going to Bengazi loaded with supplies and—judging by the explosions—a fair amount of ammunition.

"No. 11: Found myself in the path of a fast naval auxiliary heading for Tobruk. Four torpedoes hit the ship which disappeared immediately. We had an encounter with a German U-boat. I fired torpedoes, but it sighted their tracks and ran away. I surfaced and engaged him with a gun but he dived.

"No. 12: Spent trying to intercept heavily guarded convoys to Tobruk. One 5000-ton ship torpedoed.

"No. 13: In the Aegean. Small transport, two small supply ships and a steam tug sunk."

Primers and Signal Mirrors to Help Save Seamen

By the Associated Press

Experiences of scores of men who reached safety after their merchant vessels were torpedoed have been published in a Coast Guard life-saving primer "designed to help save seamen's lives if their ships are sunk."

"Simple things that the landlubber dismisses as trifles not worth bothering about," the Coast Guard says, "can mean the difference between life and death to men in a lifeboat."

A bit of metal—part of a tin can—fastened to the oar of one lifeboat glittered brightly in the sun and attracted attention of a rescue vessel. Now, the Coast Guard says, every lifeboat will have a metal mirror to reflect the sun's rays.

There'll be plastic whistles in every seaman's equipment, too. Police whistles now are carried—but they're metal, and in extreme cold can't be used without tearing the lips.

Ladders from engine rooms fixed firmly in place, rescued men have reported, frequently snapped or were torn loose by the concussion when torpedoes struck a ship. The result—all American ships will have supplementary chain or wire ladders hanging loosely.

A simple little trick to avoid illness caused by drinking salt water also is outlined in the new book. It tells how to catch rain water in canvas spread in the lifeboat—but, here's the trick, the first catch of water must be discarded, for the canvas invariably is coated with salt spray which pollutes the first catch.

Russians Gain 17 Miles in Kharkov Drive

fore Stalingrad.

Below Proletarskaya the Russians cleared out the enemy from the entire northern bank of the Manych Canal. The canal lies between the lake area of the north central Caucasus and the Manych River that flows northward into the Don east of Rostov.

Deeper in the Caucasus the Russians advancing northwestward along the Mineralnye Vody-Armavir-Rostov railway captured Nevinnomysskaya, only 50 miles from Armavir on the approaches to the Nazi-held Maikop oil fields.

Thus the Russians were slowly tightening an almost completed noose around the Nazi armies in the Caucasus, forcing them to fall back on Rostov, which is meanaced from the north and east by Russian armies operating as close as 60 or 70 miles.

Nevinnomysskaya, 200 miles southeast of Rostov, is the lower end of the irregular loop, and the western end is the Black Sea.

The Russians were storming two major German positions about Leningrad tonight in an effort to widen the corridor of relief.

The Leningrad-Volkhov River armies, whose juncture some days ago had lifted the Leningrad siege, were assaulting two powerful Nazi garrison points, one of which was described in field dispatches as the enemy's main stronghold in the Volkhov area to the southeast of the city.

A third fortified center of enemy resistance had fallen to the Leningrad offensive, and with it a series of blockhouses and dugouts.

The campaign to cut down the last of the trapped Nazi forces about Stalingrad went forward with the slow and bloody destruction of enemy strong points, and the offensive west of Moscow rolled over five more populated points southwest of Velikie Luki.

Nowhere, from the Neva River near Leningrad south to the Kuban in the Caucasus, were the Germans able to halt the Red advance.

The invader's most stubborn resistance was on the Leningrad-Volkhov Front, where he still had in hand numerous fine fortifications and an abundance of munitions, weapons and troops.

The Voronecz Front appeared perhaps his weakest; it was there that the Italians, Hungarians and Germans were sagging perceptibly.

The day brought a description by the government newspaper Izvestia of the first meeting between units of the Leningrad and Volkhov armies.

A company from the Leningrad army commanded by Capt. Edor Sobakin had just thrown the Germans from a workers' settlement when from the Volkhov side came a group led by Capt. Anton Demidov.

A scout yelled "There are our men!"

"Whose?" another asked.

"Leningradites!" came back the cry.

The scouts checked the password to be sure, then shouts spread through the bleak forests:

"Long Live Stalin! Long Live Leningrad!"

School Smashed by Nazi Raiders

SEEKING VICTIMS—Rescue workers search ruins of a school smashed by German bombs in yesterday's daylight air raid on London

Probably 30 heavily escorted raiders were bound for London and in all, at least 13 Focke-Wulf 190s and Messerschmitt 109 fighter-bombers were shot down by R. A. F. fighters.

Civil defense authorities said the disaster was the worst suffered by the London schools from the aerial attacks in the war. The highest previous death toll in bombed schools was 24. Twice the usual number of children had remained at the school cafeteria instead of going home, for immediately after the luncheon they were having a theater party.

Fire broke out in the school, but it was extinguished after a two-hour fight.

Residents said three planes flew low over the district and dropped bombs.

Some of the explosives wrecked an entire block of buildings nearby. Children on a playground escaped machinegun fire from the planes, but three persons half a block away were wounded.

Men digging in the school ruins came upon the mutilated body of the gray-haired school mistress, her broken arms twisted grotesquely about her head as if to shield her face. From the waist down her body was under heavy wreckage.

A few yards away her white-faced, tight-lipped husband stood, silently watching the scene.

The majority of the mothers and fathers of the children work in war factories and did not learn until tonight that their sons and daughters had been killed.

About 400 pupils attend the school and most had returned to London from evacuation areas a year ago. The building also was hit by a bomb in 1940 and five persons were killed.

Although the raid was relatively small, it resulted in the biggest dogfights over England since the dark days of the Battle of Britain. Escorted by up to 100 fighters, some 25 German fighter-bombers approached the coast at Beachyhead, fanned out and headed straight for London at top speed.

The R. A. F. and Royal Canadian Air Force fighters heavily engaged the force and damaged many others in addition to shooting down the 13.

The account of the noontime raid on London as given by D. N. B., official German news agency, would have surprised many Londoners who scanned the skies in vain for a sight of a German plane.

D. N. B. reported that the center of the capital was "blitzed" by "waves of fighter bombers accompanied by 100 fighters."

This formidable fleet, according to the D. N. B. version served up to the German people, "appeared over the great Thamas bend, swooped down on districts east and northeast of Greenwich Park," dropped bombs at rooftop height on Trafalgar Road, and shot down seven barrage balloons. Nothing was said about child victims.

R. A. F. May Bomb Rome Heavily

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 20.—Rome will be bombed to the best of the R. A. F.'s ability and as heavily as possible if the course of the war should render such action "convenient and helpful," Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today in answer to a question as to whether Rome could be considered an open city.

BEW Cuts Jones' Control Over Strategic Imports

sued a special directive to the BEW giving it the power to order Jones to carry out BEW's orders as far as foreign purchases were concerned.

Prior to that order, according to testimony by Wallace and Milo Perkins, BEW executive director, before the Senate Banking Committee, Jones had only sent one man to South America to scout for rubber.

BEW Active in Field

After April 13 BEW carried on its rubber purchase activities on its own, sending agents everywhere to buy available supplies.

Last December legislation to restore Jones' authority over BEW failed of passage only after testimony by Wallace and Perkins.

Wallace and Perkins were said to have sharply protested to Jeffers over returning Jones' rubber powers and to have suggested a number of alternative plans for handling the conflict, including the creation of a separate agency to handle rubber. The BEW officials were said to have objected most strongly to being relegated to an "advisory" position since they failed to get fast enough action when they were in an advisory relationship to Jones prior to April 13.

BEW officials were said to have examined the various presidential orders involved searchingly and to have come to the conclusion that Jeffers was technically within his rights in issuing the order. Fearing that efforts might be made to give Jones authority over other aspects of BEW activities, Wallace proceeded to issue the new order redefining his relationship with Jones.

Leaves Jones No Discretion

In effect, the new arrangement leaves Jones no discretion but to sign any contract which BEW places before him and then to carry it out.

BEW secured power to issue this order under the April 13 executive order which also authorized them to set up their own financing agency. BEW has generally proceeded in negotiations with Jones on a consultative basis, holding in reserve the enormous power implicit in the executive order.

An official close to Jeffers said that BEW's powers were reduced after Jeffers found it impossible to get BEW and Rubber Reserve to agree. BEW officials were said to believe that Jones inspired the action, building up a case against BEW for alleged incompetent handling of the rubber program.

Wallace's order of yesterday specified that BEW's relations with the War Production Board were to be left unchanged and that arrangements for alternative channels of communication might be worked out with the State Department.

Sherwood to Go To Africa as News Trouble-Shooter

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Robert E. Sherwood, playwright and director of overseas operations in the overseas branch of the Office of War Information, will be sent to North Africa by Elmer Davis, OWI director, in an effort to untangle information and censorship problems which have prevented the American public from receiving a clear picture of military and political developments in that area, it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Davis told a press conference that he hoped the censorship on American correspondents in North Africa would be relaxed, adding that the United States and Great Britain were not as well informed about the situation as they ought to be.

Davis pointed out that the American Army there was not an army of occupation but "merely a friendly army in an Allied country," according to the views of the State and War Departments.

'Y' Begins Year With 7968 Roll

Total Y. W. C. A. membership here at the beginning of 1943 was 7968, an increase of 10 per cent over last year, it was announced yesterday. The total includes 4375 new members.

Net receipts for 1942 were $59,259.73, $3402.20 more than in 1941.

Man Who Menaced President Guilty

Shreveport, La., Jan. 20 (AP).—A verdict of guilty as charged was returned by a jury in Federal court here this afternoon against William Thomas Reid, oil man, charged with threatening to kill President Roosevelt. The jury had been out about four and a half hours.

Reid faces a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment, a fine of $1000 or both. He also faces another indictment charging seditious utterances.

"everything we can to support the President of the United States."

3. John L. Lewis, U. M. W. president, wrote President Roosevelt that "we shall continue in every way possible to work" to get the men back to work. His assurance was given in reply to a telegram yesterday in which the Chief Executive advised him of the ultimatum to the miners.

4. The shortage of coal continued to grow more acute. Wilkes-Barre itself, in the heart of the anthracite region, faced a shortage so serious that Edward Kane, Plymouth Township school director, said schools there would have to close unless the strike ended promptly.

Tax Estimate Exceeded

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 20.—City tax collections for 1942 were estimated at $336,800. But City Treasurer Harold F. Bester announced that the estimate was far exceeded and that collections had been $419,805.

Wheeler Demands Probe on Rubber Export Report

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana and other legislators demanded yesterday that Congress be given a full report on shipments of rubber from the United States to Russia, Great Britain and other countries.

"If Great Britain is still getting rubber from Ceylon, I don't see why we are still shipping rubber to Great Britain and taking it away from this country," said Wheeler, member of an agriculture sub-committee inquiring into the rubber situation.

A report of the War Production Board made last July, which the committee voted to make public yesterday, disclosed that estimated exports of rubber from the United States to Russia and the British Empire, South American countries and Canada would total 117,000 tons for 1942 and 110,000 for 1943.

The WASHINGTON MERRY —GO— ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Faces Questioning On Lend-Lease Fund

LEND-LEASE Administrator Ed Stettinius is headed for a stormy reception when he testifies before the House Appropriations Committee on the new 11 billion dollar budget for lend-lease aid to our allies.

The hearing will be behind closed doors, and Republican committeemen are preparing to fire some hot questions about alleged irregularities in lend-lease operations, including a charge that we purchased several merchant ships from Canada which were later given to the British.

Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission has admitted this at a closed-door meeting of the House Merchant Marine Committee. Another charge to be fired at Stettinius is that we sent scarce farm implements to Britain while our own farmers were minus.

The meeting, however, will not be a one-way session. For the lend-lease boss has a surprise of his own in store for the committee. He plans to present details on "reciprocal" lend-lease—namely services we are getting from the British.

The Other Side

The American public has heard little about this phase, but we have received considerable free aid from the British, including ships, ship repairs, barrage balloons for our coastal cities, antiaircraft guns and several large naval bases in the war zone, completely built, equipped and paid for by the British.

The British also have turned over to our forces in England, without cost, a huge air depot and an adjacent airdrome with an operating personnel of 5000 workers paid by the British government.

In addition, Great Britain has built several large cantonments, storage buildings and other facilities for our troops—all without cost to Uncle Sam.

NOTE: The President once compared lend-lease to supplying a hose to put out a fire in your neighbor's house. If the fire is extinguished, but the hose is destroyed, it is still a good investment because you prevent your own home from burning down.

Officials Save Gas

SOME FEW Washington bigwigs are careless about gasoline rationing, but they are exceptions. Most Washington officialdom is scrupulously careful.

The chief justice of the United State, for instance, is riding a truck. Chief Justice Stone has discarded his private car as a means of getting to and from the Supreme Court, and instead hitch-hikes in the delivery truck which runs errands for the court. In addition, Stone is one of the walkingest members of the court.

The White House uses 11 cars now, against 15 a year ago, and these include trucks for the White House mail, as well as cars for the President and staff. White House Secretary Marvin McIntyre now rides to work in a Ford instead of a Packard.

Vice President Henry Wallace last fall abandoned his 16-cylinder limousine in favor of a humble 8-passenger sedan. Every morning he walks the 5 miles from the Wardman Park Hotel to the Capitol, and rides home in the evening.

Speaker Sam Rayburn uses his official car sparingly. He often walks from his apartment on Du-Pont Circle to Seventh Street, where he takes a streetcar to the Capitol.

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma gets to work on foot or by bus. The other day a Capitol clerk gave him a lift from a bus stop on Sixteenth Street.

Approximately 20 Congressional cars are jacked up in the Senate garage, to be unused as long as gas and tires are short.

Milo Perkins, chief of the Board of Economic Warfare, shuns the use of his official car in driving from home to office. Instead, he has joined a car pool with six other BEW members who live in the same section.

NOTE: Taking a bus to work is no novelty for Arkansas Senator Hattie Caraway, who has been doing it for years.

Arab Unrest Against U. S.

Although the French political situation in North Africa has made the headlines, the Arab situation is almost worse. Cables say flatly that unless the Arabs get food and clothing, there will be trouble.

German broadcasts are responsible for the unrest. Before the invasion, the German radio told the Arabs that food and clothing shortages were the result of the British blockade.

After the invasion, the German radio declared that "the invading (U. S.) forces are feasting upon the countryside like a horde of locusts."

But discounting the propaganda, there are severe shortages of three articles indispensable to the Arabs—tea, sugar and cotton cloth. To the Arabs, who place great faith in ritual, the severest blow is lack of cotton cloth for shrouds for the dead.

And since the Arabs greatly admire the strong, they fail to understand why the "great United States" is unable to supply their simple wants.

Tanks and Clothing

FOR RELIEF cases, food and clothing are already being shipped. But it is a terrific problem, extending to the population of 17 million Arabs in the three states—Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia. Most Arabs have money to buy provisions—but there are no provisions.

In fact, the native workmen employed by the U. S. Army are asking payment in food and clothing. Money is of no use.

Both General Eisenhower and State Department's Robert Murphy agree that supplies must be rushed. They have even gone so far as to suggest that supply ships could fill in the corners among tanks, guns and munitions with food and clothing. Eisenhower estimates that 40,000 tons of clothing a month could be shipped in this way, without adding a ship to the convoys.

But when the ships arrive, he has another problem, for the port facilities are overtaxed, and even after a ship has passed through sub-infested waters, it may have to lie in port for days before it can get to a dock.

Daughter of Baruch To Sponsor Submarine

Groton, Conn., Jan. 20 (AP).—Miss Belle Baruch, daughter of Bernard M. Baruch, international financier and special War Department advisor, will sponsor the submarine Pargo which will be launched by the Electric Boat Co. January 24, it was announced today.

Miss Baruch, who resides in New York City and Washington, D. C., will be accompanied here by her father, who served as chairman of the War Industries Board in World War I, and recently collaborated in the preparation of the "Baruch report" on the rubber situation in this country.

Bomb Splits London School In Two Like Valley of Death

By Dixie Tighe

International News Service Staff Writer

At An A. R. P. Rescue Station in the London Suburbs, Jan. 20 (INS). The German communique tomorrow will read:

"In a severe daylight raid on London military objectives were bombed."

I saw one of these military objectives today.

It didn't look like an arsenal, a locomotive works or a submarine base. It looked exactly like a large red brick schoolhouse and that's what it was.

In Happy Mood

When a bomb split the school in two like a valley of death, the children were in a particularly happy mood and many were in their best clothes. For today there was to be no afternoon school session because the children were going to see a play entitled: "Where the Rainbow Ends."

From windows the blackout curtains looked like lengths of mourning crepe as I arrived at the scene of this mass murder. In the ruined building pictures hung crazily. Tables and chairs wavered in blasted doorways and windows.

Men and women who worked to rescue what lives they could ignored the danger of these tottering objects overhead. They moved jagged debris in solemn swiftness for below the exposed mass of the ruins of what once had been two floors of classrooms was another floor buried beneath the smouldering rubble.

In the schoolyard which the Nazi "aces" sprayed with machine-gun fire, 30 dead little bodies were cradled in emergency shrouds of guana sackcloth.

Policeman Weeps Violently

A massive policeman lifted one child, shook his head and burst into violent weeping as he handed the lifeless youngster to a dry-eyed but ashen-faced nurse who tenderly covered the child with a crude cloth.

When the bomb struck women began running wildly through the streets toward the school.

And men and women A. R. P. workers, experienced in working with this special type of tragedy which so often occurs when the Nazis bomb "military objectives," quickly persuaded these mothers that their children had more of a chance of rescue if they turned back.

And, like good soldiers, they turned back, waiting with hope and terror while a demolition squad toiled to give them back their living and their dead.

U. S. Indicts 2 Food Chains On Trust Laws

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Kans., Jan. 20.—The Federal Government today brought two of the country's biggest food store chain organizations—Safeway and Kroger—under indictment on charges of violating the Sherman antitrust law, charges promptly denied by officials of the two companies.

In separate indictments, a Federal grand jury in the court of Judge Richard J. Hopkins alleged that Safeway Stores, Inc., and a group of its subsidiary organizations and officers and the Kroger Grocery & Bakery Co. and its subsidiaries and officers each conspired to restrain and monopolize trade.

Last November a Federal grand jury at Dallas indicted the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., the country's biggest food chain outfit, on similar charges.

Charges Denied

L. A. Warren, Oakland, Calif., president of Safeway, and C. M. Robertson, Cincinnati, president Kroger, denied the charges.

"Safeway has in no way violated any antitrust laws unless being efficient and rendering a low-cost service to producers and consumers has become a crime," said Warren in a bristling rejoiner.

"We have simply joined the thousands of firms and individuals including farm cooperatives, war industries, lumbermen, labor unions and press associations that have been subjected to similar inquisitions.

"This sort of harassment of American business would only be ridiculous were it not for the fact that it is typical of one effective way by which the war effort is seriously retarded. . . .

"It ought to be evident, even to the antitrust division, that these prosecutions are utterly silly at a time when the Government is already in control of the food industry through the great war powers exercised by OPA and the Food Administration."

Each indictment charged violation of the Antitrust Act by:

Acquiring Merger

Acquiring through merger and otherwise the business of independent and local chains.

Selecting local areas where they used their dominant position to destroy competition by selling at lower prices, offsetting losses by revenue from other areas.

Systematically preventing competition in selected trade areas by combining with local and national food chains to fix prices.

Obtaining a systematic discriminatory buying preference over competitors by controlling the terms and conditions under which manufacturers, processors and packers sold to them.

Roanoke College Holds 1-Man Commencement

Salem, Va., Jan. 20 (AP).—Roanoke College held a one-man commencement here today especially for F. J. Fogarty, Worcester, Mass.

Fogarty, a marine reserve, was ordered to active duty at the Parris Island Marine Officer Candidate School four days before his final examinations. College authorities agreed to waive the exams, and Dr. C. J. Smith, president of the college, dressed in his formal graduation gown, presented Fogarty his degree, before an American flag on the platform of the auditorium.

Second Inaugural Speech Adjudged Roosevelt's Best

The President's Second Inaugural Address, delivered six years ago today, has been acclaimed as his "supreme oratorical masterpiece" by a jury of speech experts, The Post was informed yesterday.

Francis DeS. Ryan of 501 Webster Street Northwest, a Treasury Department employe, queried 75 authorities on oratory, asking them to say which Roosevelt speech since 1932 was best on the basis of "speech architecture, rhetoric, diction, climax, dramatic interest and audience appeal.

One jury group consisted of college professors, Senators and Representatives comprised another, editors of New Deal newspapers and magazines was another group, and judging, too, were groups from the National Council of Teachers of English of the Speech League of America.

Called Masterpiece

Verdict of the combined juries was a five-vote majority in favor of the Second Inaugural. Twice it won. A year ago a vote was taken by Ryan among 50 authorities and the speech won by eight votes.

"The selection this year," Ryan said, "was principally due to the votes of the college and university speech instructors, who variously described the President's Second Inaugural as a masterpiece of "architectural construction, eloquence and rhetorical excellence." A majority of the Senators and Representatives favored the war speeches made since Pearl Harbor.

But one Senator (all jurymen were promised anonymity) said: "In spite of the rainstorm and piercing cold wind, I forgot everything but the speech. As the President proceeded through that climactic passage picturing "one-third of a Nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished," I felt that I was in the presence of America's master of eloquence and that he was delivering an address that would become permanently enshrined in the temple of American oratory."

Interested in Oratory

The editors gave this speech only two votes, but one in Indiana compared it to Lincoln's Gettysburg address and Webster's reply to Hayne. The jury inclined strongly toward the acceptance speech of July 2, 1932; the "Four Horsemen" speech of October 25, 1932; the first inaugural of March 4, 1933, and to others up to the war address to Congress of January 6, 1942.

Why was Ryan interested? Because of a long-time deep-seated interest in good oratory, he said yesterday.

Deferment Denied Nine Followers Of Dr. Buchman

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—Appeals for occupational deferments for nine members of the Moral Rearmament Movement have been denied by Draft Appeals Board No. 4, which sharply denounced the M.R.A.

Twenty-eight alien workers had sought deferments, asserting that as M. R. A. workers they created they created moral uplift in war plants and helped produce a skit, "You Can Defend America." The board notified 25 of the 28 of its refusal to remove from 1-A. Three other cases are pending.

The decision mentioned statements attributed to Dr. Frank Buchman, founder of the movement, who was quoted as saying in 1936 he thanked God for Hitler and believed God could control nations through the dictators.

Overtime Charge For Long Distance Calls to Be Cut

The Federal Communications Commission announced last night that the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. would reduce its long lines revenues by an estimated $50,700,000 per year, of which $34,700,000 would be an immediate saving to the public.

No reduction will be made in the charge for the initial three minutes of long-distance telephone calls, but the overtime charge will be cut.

At present the charge for each additional minute is one-third of the charge for the first three minutes, but under the new rates, the charge will be one-fourth. For example, it was stated that at present a station-to-station call from Washington to Denver costs $3 for three minutes, $5 for five minutes whereas under the new schedule the five-minute call will cost $4.50, a saving of 50 cents.

The Federal Communications Commission and other Federal agencies have been urging the public to curtail use of long distance lines.

Canada Cuts Butter

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 20 (AP).—Canada's butter ration for the next six-week period was cut by one-third today. Instead of 8 ounces a week for each person, Canadians will be entitled to only 5 1-3 ounces. The board indicated the cut would be restored, if possible, in March.

Haruna's Nemesis Decorated

Decoration of a flying fortress bombardier for plastering the 29,000-ton Japanese battleship Haruna cleared up yesterday any remaining doubt as to whether the big warship, pride of the Japanese fleet, was listed officially as sunk in the first week of the war.

Word of the decoration of Sergt. Meyer S. Levin of Brooklyn, received from Australia yesterday, told of the Haruna listing and sinking after his bomb load had been dumped upon her.

The sinking originally was announced by the War Department December 11, 1941, in a communique which told of American Army air forces attacking the ship in the South Pacific off the Northern Coast of Luzon in the Philippines.

The Navy did not list the Haruna with enemy ships destroyed, leading to some speculation as to whether she actually went to the bottom. But, the Navy said the Haruna was not listed only because she was sunk by Army and not Navy fliers, in accordance with the policy of claiming sinkings only by the armed service which inflicted the damage. The War Department has carried the Haruna as destroyed since the day following the attack December 10, 1941.

Levin was bombardier on the plane piloted by Capt. Colin Kelly, who was killed on the return trip from the exploit.

If there were any argument needed for home rule for the District of Columbia, consider the difficulty which is now being experienced in the Democratic Party to fill their quota on the District Committee in the Seventy-eighth Congress. The Committee consists of 21 members, though a proposal is afoot to reduce it to 15. Under the new apportionment the Democrats would be entitled to 12 seats. Three holdovers from the District Committee in the Seventy-seventh Congress will remain. The problem is to persuade the remaining nine assignees to stay. Four promptly backed out as soon as they were nominated, and the others are said to be equally dubious. Representative Gossett of Texas went so far as to say on Saturday that "the shock" of his selection left him "speechless" and he indicated that he would withdraw.

In a similar fix are the Republicans. If the 15-man proposal does not go through, they will have to nominate 9 members. Only one is sure, the ranking minority member of the last Congress, Representative Dirksen. He and the hard-working chairman, Representative Randolph, are the only guaranty to the District that its needs will be intelligently managed. If the Democrats are so loathe to serve in the District's City Council, the Republicans will be equally chary. Our recent expression of hope that new members might be enlisted who are experienced in municipal legislation was pretty forlorn. We can't blame the Congressmen. It is a thankless task they are asked to do. Congressmen are not lacking in interest in local problems, but their local problems are the problems of their own districts, not those of the District of Columbia. It is this situation which will trouble this community. To call it, after Representative Gossett, shocking is to put it mildly. The District, however, is not in consequence rendered "speechless," but will be increasingly vocal till the situation is remedied by giving the franchise to this community and allowing it to run its own local affairs.

Back To Slavery

We hope the President's back-to-work order will be heeded by the striking miners in the anthracite coal belt. Mr. Roosevelt speaks with the authority of Commander in Chief of a country dedicated to total war. The appeal to the patriotism of the miners as Americans is not only backed by all the moral pressures of a wartime situation; it is a command. That there is no national service act side by side with the Selective Service Act does not make any difference. No American has the same freedom he enjoyed in peacetime. In such vital war work as coal mining, the mines must be kept working. Hard coal is singularly in demand in this winter of our peril—in our factories, in our public buildings, in our homes. Thousands of people today are suffering from the cold as a result of war-induced shortages of other kinds of fuel. In these circumstances any government would be derelict in its elementary duty to tolerate a walkout which has no justification in law or equity and which is outlawed by the union as well as the Government agencies concerned with labor.

But the problem which this strike has revealed will not be settled by the return to work of the striking workers. These men may have flouted all the canons of behavior in wartime. Nevertheless, as we have said before, the part of wisdom would be to see this particular strike as a distress signal. The workers have found themselves enveloped in a despotism of their own creation. Man in general is bound to his craft, and this is particularly true of coal miners. Once a coal miner, always a coal miner. But there is not a chance on earth of any miner remaining in his calling and thus having any livelihood at all if he runs foul of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America. There were taskmasters in the "bad old days," but there is no progress in exchanging taskmasters.

The strikers merely showed by their walkout in protest against the jacking up of union dues that the workers already are balking under this application of the fuehrerprinzip in American labor. If the Administration won't heed the distress signal, Congress must. Economic freedom is a shining freedom to add to the gallery of freedoms for what we are fighting. Ask the freemen of Europe who are now doing slave labor for Hitler, and you will hear this hope of freedom expressed everywhere. Ask, for that matter, these American workers in the coal fields. Economic security can be sustained without the sacrifice of liberties lost with the abettance of this Administration. Legislation to make sure that our labor unions are servants of their members and not their masters rates high among the "musts" of the Seventy-eighth Congress.

OSS Reaches Out

It has long been apparent that the road to Berlin and Tokyo will be facilitated by our ability—by radio, by broadsides dropped from the skies, and so on—to win over the minds of the people en route to our goals. This job is called psychological warfare. It is every whit as important as actual combat. But in our loosely related scheme of warmaking psychological warfare has been operating in a near-vacuum. That is to say, it has not been meshed with our strategy. The result is that General Eisenhower is reputed to have told the War Department that our propagandists were giving him almost as much of a headache as the Germans.

That is the reason that the joint chiefs of staff want to get their hands on the machinery of our foreign propaganda. Mr. Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information is at present in titular control of it. But the direction is vested in the chief of OWI's overseas branch, Robert E. Sherwood. How Mr. Sherwood operates has long been one of Washington's mysteries. He has a large staff of ideologists who seem to be well versed in the Four Freedoms, but not so well endowed with the common sense to apply their learning and enthusiasm with prudence and knowledge of local situations, and not so well grounded in the technics of psychological warfare. At any rate, the joint chiefs of staff feel with General Eisenhower that their work has furnished less aid than hindrance in the prosecution of our military operations. Hence they have requested that Mr. Sherwood's agency report in future to Col. William J. Donovan's Office of Strategic Services, which is under the joint chiefs of staff. The directive has set off a jurisdictional dispute of some magnitude. Already it is reputed to have precipitated a rain of resignations on the President's overladen desk, beginning with Mr. Sherwood's.

There can be no doubt that the two kinds of warfare should be fitted together like the hand to the glove. Mr. Sherwood might contend that every week he does consult the strategists before launching his offensive abroad. But the consultation seems to be informal. And it appears to be accomplished with the wrong agency. Mr. Sherwood and his aides habitually confer with the Military Intelligence branch of the War Department. But G 2, as it is familiarly called, has nothing to do with strategy. It furnishes technical information to the War Department on such matters as the military situation in other countries. There is no guide here for the propagandists. What they need for their work is light on our strategy so that they may adjust their propaganda accordingly. If, for example, they knew the next step after Tunisia, they might be in a position to soften that position psychologically.

The Office of Strategic Services could supply precisely this guidance, if its relation with the joint chiefs is as close as reputed. Certainly the joint chiefs look to the OSS for the material upon which to base strategy, not the intelligence services of either the Army or the Navy. In this respect the OSS has earned the confidence of the joint chiefs by the encyclopaedic range of its information and its imaginative grasp of all the related problems attendant upon making war. For this reason the case for control of foreign propaganda by OSS seems to be well grounded.

How the President will settle this latest jurisdictional dispute is uncertain. Mr. Sherwood is a White House intimate whose pen has given the President powerful aid in expounding his war and peace policies. He will not be easily budged. But, though the issue is seen as the Davis-Sherwood vs. Donovan conflict, nevertheless it far transcends personalities. The job is the thing, and the best means of doing it. We must be careful and in our foreign propaganda, particularly in North Africa, it must likewise be unremitting. While our North African enterprise is still languishing in the mud, no such weather conditions impede our foreign propaganda. Indeed, our military stalemate should intensify our propagandistic activity. We now know how well the Nazis have operated on the mind of North Africa. We must counter their effort, beat them at their own game, and thus use time profitably which must be consumed before we can press the fight for Tunisia to success.

Road To Tripoli

Yesterday the British Eighth Army, moving westward across Libya, reached a point less than 50 miles from Tripoli—or less than the distance that separated the Afrika-Korps from Alexandria last June. So in a little more than seven months the situation in Libya has been completely reversed. And there is this additional difference of great importance. At El Alamein the British lines held, and Marshal Rommel was never again able to get his offensive in motion before his own lines were irreparably smashed. Now it is only a matter of time before Tripoli will be in General Montgomery's hands.

We can take it for granted that Rommel would have made a stand at El Agheila or Misurata or some other defensible point on the long road from Bengazi to Tripoli if he had had the strength to do so. For it is extremely doubtful whether the Axis can hold Tunisia without retaining at least part of Tripolitania. And while part of Rommel's force may succeed in escaping into Tunisia, the strengthening of General Nehring's forces will be offset by the increased burden placed on the Axis supply lines to Tunisia. The fact of the matter is that Rommel's present retreat to Tripoli and beyond is the final confession of failure by one who, not so long ago, appeared to hold the destiny of the Middle East in his hands. The end of Axis domination of that vast area stretching from the Tunisian border to Egypt and beyond is now only a matter of days.

Welcome to Chile

There will be widespread rejoicing throughout the American continent over the decision of Chile to sever relations with the Axis countries. The decision is a triumph for freedom of the press. Up till October 8, when Mr. Sumner Welles in a speech in Boston warned Chile of a widespread Axis spy ring in her midst, the Chileans had played down these Axis activities. Mr. Welles' friendly speech raised a tempest that could not be ignored. To be sure, President Rios postponed his visit to President Roosevelt, but the major result was that the Chileans undertook a house cleaning. The Foreign Ministership changed hands, and the Axis agents, who had been responsible for losses of our ships at sea, were rounded up. The indignation which the disclosures caused among the Chilean people led directly to the break with the Axis countries which the continent is now celebrating.

The solidarity of this great hemisphere is now almost complete. There is only one outsider, one country that refuses to march in step, and that is Argentina. The tragedy is that this solitariness does not correspond with the true sentiments of the Argentines. They are simply unable to make their voices heard. In a country which used to pride itself on a civilization founded on liberty and tolerance, freedom of speech and freedom of the press are not allowed. Moreover, the people are kept in the dark about the facts of the world situation. It is even doubtful whether the Argentines will read of the stalwart stand of their neighbors across the Andes.

Still the government in Buenos Aires will doubtless reconsider its position in the light of Chile's action. All the reptilian elements of the Nazi espionage ring in South America will now be washed up in Argentina. That ring, which was originally the spearhead for the Nazi conquest of South America, is much more dangerous to the institutions of Argentina than to the rising fortunes of the United Nations. Already the situation has been responsible for the loss of the precious freedoms for which all America fought in its wars of liberation. So Buenos Aires in self-interest must take stock again. On the one hand is a bleak and lonely isolation. That isolation will cut off Argentina from its sister nations in peace as it is cutting her off in war. On the other hand is association with the republics of the Americas in free and unfettered partnership to uproot a tyranny which is a common menace. It will be possible to rebuild the continent together only after we have saved it.

Pedestrian Laws

Another of our correspondents has been given a ticket for jaywalking. He complains against the local regulations, but we are afraid his conclusions arise from misapprehensions as to the facts. He says that more pedestrians have been killed in Washington than ever during the past year. This is true to a slight degree, but it is also true that there are more pedestrians than ever in Washington, an estimated 30 per cent more. Also pedestrian fatalities at intersections have been cut in half in Washington since the institution of laws controlling jaywalkers. Before the Commissioners now is the draft of a bill destined further to reduce accidents by allowing arrests of those jaywalking between intersections controlled by traffic lights. It has been found that the largest fatality group in statistical breakdowns is the number of pedestrians killed crossing midway of a block. Our correspondent also says that National Safety Council records show that Boston, where no pedestrian laws exist, has the lowest death rate from highway accidents of any American city of over 500,000 residents. Most current figures on this subject, however, are to be found in the January issue of Public Safety Magazine. For the first 11 months of 1942, the National Safety Council placed Washington fifth on the list of cities of 500,000 or over with lowest death rates from highway accidents. Boston was not mentioned. It would seem that pedestrian control laws have been eminently successful in Washington. Surely pedestrians, whether they like it or not, should be just as liable to laws designed for public safety as motorists.

MYSTERY

Not even in worship will I speak the name
Of him I love. For once when Israel came
Beneath the mountain whence the laws were riven,
Jehovah to his holy servant spoke
Two names, by one of which they should invoke
His majesty on earth, and one in heaven.
I shall be still, and wait to claim my own;
But, till that hour, he must be called alone
The Well-Beloved, the Divinely Given.

CATHERINE RUTH SMITH.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

The Warring South

Jacksonville, Fla.—Columnist Paul Mallon said recently that he had "irrefutable evidence" that "all of the Southern and border States, with the possible exception of Florida, are in an extreme condition of psychological political revolution" against Washington's "use of totalitarian methods." He based this generalization on "a trip through five Southern States."

I have also just visited five Southern States, talking to hundreds of people in villages, towns and cities, and my conclusion is that exactly the reverse is true. The people of the southeastern United States are supporting the Administration and the war wholeheartedly, with far less "beefing" than one hears in Washington.

Administration Supported

There are exceptions, of course. But they are numerically unimportant, however vociferous. The chief dissenters are:

(1) A few newspaper editors. In private conversation many of these bitterly oppose the Administration's policies.

The strongest statement I have heard was that of a Florida editor who predicted that there would be a new Ku Klux Klan movement because of the efforts of Northerners to force abolition of the poll tax in Congress last year, and the threat of the C. I. O. to unionize the South. But Florida has no poll tax; and when questioned, the Florida editor admitted that he referred to conditions in Georgia and other poll-tax States, and that his evidence was based principally on reading other newspapers. In most Southern towns where the industries have been unionized, the C. I. O. seems to be accepted as a part of the community.

In South Carolina I heard rumors that the Negroes were planning an uprising when the able-bodied whites were off to war; but I met no one who believed the rumors. The Ku Klux Klan there is actually at a very low ebb, which suggests that the Negro question is nowhere near the boiling point.

(2) There are some businessmen and manufacturers who frankly dislike the Administration. They are doing a rushing business, but they believe that New Deal labor legislation and the excess profits tax hit them harder than the big monoplies. One small businessman told me that he wished it was politically possible to be a Republican in his county so he could vote against Roosevelt and his "gang." One hears this sort of talk in the smoking compartment of any southbound Pullman car, but not in the coaches.

(3) Proprietors of Florida tourist resorts which have not been taken over by the armed forces are facing the poorest season in their history, and some of them are understandably angry at the "bungling" policy of the Government which keeps changing the gas rationing rules. They also resent the way in which their communities are being passed up by the war.

Perhaps Mr. Mallon's contacts were principally with these groups. The little people of the South—the farmers and the working men—are heartily in favor of the way the war is being conducted, although they are somewhat bewildered by the sprawling Federal war agencies.

Southern labor is cooperating in the war. There have been practically no strikes in the textile and other mills in the first year of the war. And Southerners are resentful when they hear of strikes in the anthracite coal region or in the cities of the industrial North.

The fact is, the war is closer to the common people of the South than to most city dwellers of the North and East. The reasons for this are simple:

Many Southerners Volunteer

The South, with its high birth rate and large number of youths eligible for the draft, has a disproportionately high number of men in the armed forces. More than that, poverty is so widespread that to Southern youth Army life seems attractive by comparison to life "back home." Southerners are volunteering by the thousands, before their numbers come up.

Because so many Southerners live in small towns and rural areas where everyone knows everyone else, practically every family has a member or two in the services. The war doesn't need to be "brought home" to the people of Lawrenceville, Ga., where the whole town knows the local lad who was taken prisoner by the Japanese early in the war. Every contribution to the war effort means something personal to these townspeople.

So many Army camps are located in the South that men in uniform are in evidence everywhere. To the Southerner this is a living demonstration of the might of our war effort.

The war has brought some hard problems to the South, the greatest of which is the shortage of farm help. Not all of last year's bumper cotton crop was picked before the rains set in. This year the AAA program calls for cotton acreage as large as that of 1942. But farmers are worried about "making" (plowing, sowing and cultivating) this year's crop, to say nothing of getting it in next fall. They foresee still worse conditions coming, with the draft taking more farmers' sons and wagehands off to war.

Leningrad Relieved

By Barnet Nover

The Apotheosis Of Fortitude

NOVER

THE LIFTING of the siege of Leningrad is an event of such far-reaching importance that it overshadows even the spectacular developments taking place along the Don and in the Caucasus. In many respects it constitutes the greatest outstanding Russian military triumph of the war. But the lifting of the siege of Leningrad is far more than a military victory. It is also a tremendous triumph for the human spirit.

In the south—at Stalingrad, along the Don bend, in the foothills of the Caucasus and in the Eastern Ukraine—the Russians are today engaged in winning back what they lost to the Nazis in the summer and fall of 1942. At Leningrad, however, the Red army has begun to reverse that older tide, the tide that swept in from Germany in the months following the opening assault on Russia in June, 1941.

THE SIEGE of Leningrad lasted 17 months, the longest recorded siege in history for a city of that size. What happened in the old Russian capital during those 17 months beggars description. The story is one of unbelievable suffering and privation and also of incredible fortitude and heroism.

According to Leland Stowe of the Chicago Daily News, no fewer than a million of Leningrad's three million inhabitants died during that first winter alone, and some estimates of the price which Russia paid in keeping that city out of Hitler's hands run even higher.

Large numbers were killed by German bombs and shells, for the city was within short range of German artillery and within easy reach of the forward German air bases. But a very much larger number died of cold and hunger and disease.

THERE HAVE been many sieges in this war but none like that of Leningrad. Stalingrad, a city a fourth the size, was pounded to bits by German bombers that came over by the hundreds day after day to drop their loads of death and destruction on the Volga metropolis. But Stalingrad has a river in its rear and across that river supplies kept coming over from the other side even during the worst period.

Moscow was never strictly under siege. But the attack upon it during the critical weeks of October and November, 1941, was the fiercest which any great center has ever had to put up with. But Moscow never lost contact with its vast hinterland.

For months on end Leningrad was cut off almost completely. So low did the stocks of food become that during the fearful winter of 1941-42 the dead were not buried, the living using the ration cards of the dead to vouchsafe themselves a few more crumbs of bread.

THE FREEZING of Lake Ladoga did permit the laying of tracks across the ice and some supplies did get into Leningrad. But they were never considerable. Yet if their bodies gave way under the strain of incredible privations the spirit of the people of Leningrad never faltered.

Having failed to take the city in the first forward thrust of his troops, Hitler decided to win Leningrad by a policy of attrition. He stood by awaiting the day when the people and the garrison of the city would be so weakened by cold and hunger that they would lack the strength to resist a frontal assault. But that day never came.

THE RELIEF of Leningrad, coupled with the capture of Velikie Luki, threatens the entire northern flank of the far-flung German line in Russia.

These developments are certain to increase the growing disinclination of the Finns to keep on fighting on Germany's side. They will also have a decidedly debilitating effect on the morale of the other Axis satellites as well as on Germany's own morale.

It is hardly surprising, under the circumstances, that Nazi propagandists are hard put to it to find ways and means of softening the impact of disastrous news from Russia on the German people, news they no longer can hide from them.

SO FAR as the outside world is concerned one likely consequence of the Russian developments may be a Nazi peace offensive, based on the idea that a strong Germany is now more than ever needed as a "bulwark" against communism.

Hitler had considerable success with that argument when he was on his way to power and for some years after he had taken possession of the German government. It met with failure when he tried to use that argument to persuade the western democracies to let him fight an isolated war with the Soviet Union. Winston Churchill spiked that hope within a few hours after Hitler had stabbed Russia in the back. The enemy, he made it clear, is Nazi Germany and she alone.

Nothing daunted, the Nazis may revert to the old theme, emphasizing this time the fact that Germany is now threatened with engulfment by a Red tide, and after Germany, Europe.

In other words, the Nazis are banking on the same reactionary forces that enabled Hitler to get where he is to save them and Germany from retribution. Should these tactics succeed, the Allies will have lost the war before winning it.

Juries Don't Exonerate

One is really saddened at the constant iteration by well-known columnists and men in public life of the absurd misstatement concerning Mr. Edward J. Flynn proclaiming that he has been exonerated upon a charge of attempting to defraud the Borough of the Bronx in the matter of the paving stones by two grand juries.

A grand jury can no more exonerate than it can convict a citizen charged with the commission of a crime. That body registers the wishes—not necessarily the opinion or judgment—of its constitutional adviser, the district attorney.

In one or perhaps two instances in New York, a grand jury has made a presentment charging the district attorney with failing in his duty because he would not submit an indictment to the inquisitorial body. In the case I recall that action was followed by the appointment of a special prosecutor.

The prosecutor in the Bronx who handled the charges against Mr. Flynn owes his office to that gentleman, and to him he must look for future advancement. His failure to ask the grand jury for an indictment does not convict Mr. Flynn nor does it absolve him.

Bonds Not Balls

On the President's birthday, I am going to buy another $18.75 War Bond and go to bed early, saying a prayer for the continued health of Mr. Roosevelt.

No birthday balls for me this year. I have gone to five of them. I honor our President, and I am anxious to see infantile paralysis conquered but this year we are trying to win a war.

Somehow I can't stomach the idea of people being asked to pay $10 for a ticket to a hotel dance this year. Somehow I can't stand the thought of having to see another of those ducky pictures of Mrs. Roosevelt surrounded by Hollywood movie stars at the White House.

On that day I would rather see a picture of President Roosevelt pinning a medal on Mrs. Sullivan, the Iowa mother of five sons lost on the Juneau. A. E. F.

Pedestrian Law

I have just enjoyed the experience of being given a "ticket" by a traffic cop for recklessly crossing a Washington street against a red light. I am properly indignant, as any free-born American should be. And I could make numberless alleged wisecracks like, "I thought traffic officers existed for the purpose of protecting pedestrians, not persecuting them," and "The next time I'm caught, I suppose they'll take my walking ration away from me," etc. ad nauseam.

But I believe I have more valid grounds for complaint than that. Washington's record of the past year in which, if I am not mistaken, more pedestrians were killed than ever before, shows the impracticability of such a system. I happen to come from a city, Boston, which proceeds on the rather sensible premise that automobiles do the killing in street accidents, not pedestrians. For that reason the complete responsibility for such accidents is placed on the automobile operator, where it belongs. Similarly, if a pedestrian is so crazy as to risk death in the path of approaching cars, he is permitted to. The result is, as I think you will find if you consult the statistics of the National Safety Council in Chicago, Boston has the lowest death rate from highway accidents of any American city of over 500,000 population. Certainly it is far lower than Washington's.

Just at present, of course, there is another factor. With gasoline rationing and "pleasure driving" banned, there is considerably less motor traffic—almost none in the middle of the day when I was gestapoed—and, by the same token, considerably less danger to pedestrians. But I suppose the District traffic officers, finding few motorists to occupy their time, will now concentrate on pedestrians, until—which sometimes seems to be Washington's goal—everything comes to a complete stop, walking as well as riding.

And added to waiting for food in cafeterias, waiting to cash checks in banks, waiting to get your hair cut, waiting for buses, waiting to get into the movies, people who are in Washington against their will will now suffer the humiliating annoyance of having to waste many valuable minutes every day before crossing streets which are as clear of traffic as a Vermont lane!

Florida Resort News

Mr. and Mrs. T. Chidsey Wumps arrived at Miami Beach for their winter vacation and feel as conspicious as a pair of patent leather shoes in an Army locker. The Wumps were in their hotel 48 hours before being made to vacate by the armed forces. This is a record for the season.

Col. and Mrs. Cheevers Oopsy are occupying their Palm Beach villa without any discomforts, but are pretty apprehensive.

Gwendolyn Queepers, last year's Miss Miami Beach, while bathing yesterday climbed on a float to rest and presently found herself 10 miles inland. It seems the float was really an amphibious tank engaged in landing maneuvers.

Gormley P. Frizzle has swapped his showplace on the Biscayne Bay for a bicycle and some new flashlight batteries.

The Willoughby Gruffs have rented the blackout room formerly occupied by the Payton Smathers.

T. Mason Filch, who has nine grown daughters, has added a large wing to the east end to hold uniformed boy friends.

Eye doctors in the Miami area report the biggest business in years, thousands of visitors having suffered eye strain as a result of trying to study New Orleans race charts with a flashlight.

Several new rules have been announced on Miami Beach golf courses. If a ball is found under a bombing plane the plane may be held to be a casual bomber and the ball moved out without penalty. All formations of soldiers up to a regiment encountered on fairways may be regarded as unintended hazards and the ball moved to the right or left without penalty.

Hemingway Zilkers, who has come down here for a nervous breakdown every season for the last several years, got it in 48 hours this year.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Casper Gillybutt, who were at the Towers, the Pancoast, the Roney Plaza and the East Wind during their first two days here, are now stopping at the Gulf Stream, the Tropic Park, the Dunes and the Seaview, but may have to move to the Binnicle, New Moon or McGillicuddy Arms any minute.

The Bathing beauty carnival, which was scheduled at the Miami Biltmore for 1941 and which can't be held in 1942, has been postponed to 1943 or 1944.

Gideon K. Toopsey is laid up from a bad case of embarrassment. He had to stand on a main street in white flannels and a sports coat while thousands of soldiers paraded by.

Useful Work For Objectors

In Civilian Public Service camps throughout the Nation there are about 6000 men who, because of their opposition to war, have been sent there by the many local draft boards.

The Selective Service Act calls for "work of national importance" for objectors. The work done in C. P. S. under the several governmental agencies is of questionable importance and for the most part is "made" work. The men feel that in a Nation and world of so much need, they are being wasted. Moreover it is disastrous to morale for men to be boondoggling while their fellow men are undergoing great hardships. There are men from all walks of life in C. P. S.: farmers, accountants, doctors, technicians, laborers, mechanics, social workers and representatives from many other fields. Should they be allowed to pursue work in needed fields it would represent at least a step toward the solution of our critical manpower shortage. They simply ask work that does not promote the war effort. In this way they would no longer resemble slave labor but would be paid and could provide for their own hospitalization. Their dependents would no longer be thrown on charity for help and the objectors would undergo the same privations as all civilians but would not be subjected to extrapunitive treatment because of conscience. And, most important, they could fill a place of service to their fellow men rather than being forced to "sit this one out."

Such an arrangement is wholly in the realm of possibility under the present setup. Selective Service, as a unit of the new war Manpower Commission, might easily adopt a policy of occupational classifications for C P. S. men of certain talents and abilities. The British government treats its objectors in just such manner.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Super-Duper Realism

An experienced Washington correspondent, Mr. Kingsbury Smith, has an article in the current "American Mercury" in which he undertakes to expound Secretary Hull's views on our political war strategy. The essential point, as Mr. Smith puts it, is that "there are most likely to be other deals with other Darlans in the other conquered and Axis-dominated countries. The only time our policy is likely to be qualified is when we reach Germany. In Germany, as I understand it, we will refuse to deal with any member of the Hitler gang, but we will deal with any responsible element ready to overthrow the Nazis and disarm the German army . . . In Italy, we stand ready to deal with any leader—other than Mussolini—who will help open the gates to our armies and the same goes for Hungary and the Balkan countries."

LIPPMANN

If this is a correct report of anyone's views, let alone Mr. Hull's, somebody is not thinking clearly enough. For Mr. Kingsbury Smith's informant has lumped together, as if it were all one and the same problem (a) the French empire which we hope to mobilize as a fighting ally (b) the small conquered countries of Europe in which we hope some day to land troops (c) an enemy country like Italy. The clue to his confusion is in the phrase "who will help open the gates to our armies."

NOW IT is probably true that the utmost we can hope for from Italy is that the gates of Italy should be opened to our armies. But the essence of the French question is that we want much more than that from the French. From them we want a French army to fight on our side. Whereas all we expect of the Italians is that they should stop fighting against us of the French we expect that they will with increasing force fight along with us.

That elementary and paramount distinction seems not to have occurred to the man who informed Mr. Kingsbury Smith about what Mr. Hull is supposed to think. Yet that is the nub of the whole problem of Darlan, of Giraud and De Gaulle. Nobody in his senses has ever had any doubt that it was right to treat with Darlan to get our armies ashore as quickly as possible and with the least loss of life. The real question is, and has always been, whether Darlan or any of his ilk would be able, and could be trusted, to bring all available Frenchmen and all French resources actively into the war. Clearly the President did not think so or he would not have announced that the Darlan arrangement was temporary and that "people in the United Nations would never understand the recognition of a reconstituting of the Vichy government in France or in any French territory."

It would be a thousand pities if the State Department had failed to grasp this point.

THERE ARE those who hold, and I believe the event will show them to be right in their practical judgment, that apart from some native African troops which always obey their officers, French armies cannot be made to fight effectively except under leaders whom they trust, and with the conviction that they are fighting for France. Suppose we had been conquered as France is conquered, and our Government destroyed, and there were still say 10 divisions of American troops somewhere in Africa, and they were asked to fight under British or Russian high command. Would these American troops fight well if foreigners said to them "Do not talk to us about the interests of the United States; go and fight, and when we have won, we shall be glad to let you talk about American interests." How can we fail to understand that you cannot treat free born soldiers in this fashion, that you cannot summon them to battle and treat them as if they were mercenary troops or cannon fodder without the right to ask questions that make clear for whom and for what they are asked to risk their lives? It is all very well to thump our chests, bang the table, and shout that we are super-duper realists. But it just is not realism to forget about human nature when we form our policies for dealing with human beings.

IT IS not only in failing to see the difference between France and Italy that Mr. Kingsbury Smith's informant discloses his unclarity of mind. This great realist tells us that when we come to Germany, we won't deal with the Nazi gang. We will, he says, deal with anyone else who will "disarm the German army." I beg to suggest that nothing ought to suit us better than to receive an unconditional surrender from Hitler himself. It would be infinitely preferable to have the surrender come from the arch-criminal himself than to have it come in such a way as to let the Nazis who survive, and plenty of them will, pretend that they were undefeated but only, once again, stabbed in the back by defeatists.

Unfortunately, Hitler will either be dead or will have taken asylum in a neutral country. That being the probability, let us be clear about the difference between those from whom we accept an unconditional surrender of the German Army, and those with whom we are ready to "deal." Surrender can be accepted from anybody who can surrender. But "treating with" and making a "deal with" is a wholly different matter.

No such distinction seems to have been recognized by Mr. Smith's informant. Yet it is the critical distinction. For unconditional surrender, no matter by whom, is victory. But a deal, even if accompanied by disarmament, which restores to power or leaves in power Germans who intend to negotiate themselves out of the consequences of defeat, would be a foolish concession.

For when Germany is at the point where anybody can disarm the German army, then it will be quite unnecessary to make a deal with him which makes any concession that is short of unconditional surrender.

TO SAY this is not to imply that we should not pledge ourselves to a post-war world in which Germany, after an unconditional surrender, can earn her way to equality and respect. On the contrary, we should emphasize and elaborate that pledge. But we should never make a deal with any German which obscures and confuses the stipulation that Germany can qualify herself for an equal place among the United Nations only by an unconditional surrender in this war, and by the proof which Germans themselves give thereafter that they really mean to qualify themselves by punishing the guilty, by purging themselves of their aggressive ambitions, and by making at least some moral reparation for their crimes.

Macauley Praises Merchant Marine's Engineer Officers

Capt. Edward Macauley, maritime commissioner and deputy war shipping administrator, yesterday paid tribute to the engineering officers of the United States Merchant Marine in an address to the National Marine Engineers Beneficial Association in convention at the Hotel Lee-Sheraton.

The maritime commissioner cited the work of "those who carried on below deck without the satisfaction and stimulation of openly fighting the enemy."

Captain Macauley also expressed his appreciation to Samuel J. Hogan, president of the engineering association, for the fine cooperation given the maritime service by his group.

Today the convention will honor the men of the merchant marine who have lost their lives in the war. A scroll has been on display, honoring these men.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 9
What To Report

In preparing a Federal income tax return, income from whatever source, unless specifically exempt by statute, must be reported in the return. The types of income specifically exempt are listed in the instructions accompanying the return form.

In addition to salaries, wages, fees and commissions which must be reported, all bonuses, tips, prizes and awards, and other forms of compensation, must be included. A minister of the Gospel must report all fees he receives for funerals, for masses, for baptisms, for marriages, and for other like services. If a person is paid in whole or in part for his services in anything other than money, the fair market value of whatever was received must be reported as income. This applies to the rental value of quarters furnished an employe as part of his compensation (with the exception of the rental value of parsonages furnished to ministers of the Gospel), board and lodging furnished as part of an employe's compensation, where the board and lodging is not provided primarily for the convenience of the employer.

Income must be reported whether received in hand or not, if there is "constructive receipt;" that is, if it has been credited to the account of, or set apart for, a taxpayer without any substantial limitation or restriction, and which may be drawn upon by him at any time. This applies to interest credited to a savings account and subject to withdrawal during the year, to dividend checks received during the year, whether cashed or not, to interest coupons maturing during the year whether cashed or not (unless the bond is in default and no funds are available to pay the interest coupons), and the like.

Interest accumulated, or accrued, during the year, on war savings bonds may be treated by a taxpayer reporting his income on the cash basis either as income during the year, or the accrual may be deferred until the maturity of the bonds and reported as income then. However, a taxpayer on the cash basis who elects to report such income as it accrues must adhere to that method in all subsequent returns.

A farmer who trades or exchanges the produce of his farm for goods or services must report as income the value of the goods or services received by such trade or exchange.

Alimony and separate maintenance payments periodically received by a wife subsequent to decree of divorce or of separate maintenance must be reported as income.

In the case of noncommissioned military and Navy personnel, compensation for military or naval service, to the extent of $250 for a single person and $300 in the case of a married person or head of family, received during the year, may be excluded in reporting income. Also the amounts contributed by the Government to the serviceman's "monthly family allowance" are in the nature of gifts by the Government and need not be included in income.

U-Boat Menace Grave

By Griffing Bancroft
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Noble, Davis Warn Of Raids To Come

Admiral Sir Percy Noble, former commander of antisubmarine warfare in Britain, and Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, joined yesterday in pronouncing the U-boat menace extremely grave.

Davis reported that German submarines have sunk more Allied shipping so far this month than they did during a similar period in December.

Calling for "escort vessels, more escorts and yet more escorts," Admiral Noble declared:

"It will take all our strength, all our determination and all our initiative to overcome the danger of the U-boats. Unless we beat the U-boats we are in danger of losing our sea power and the war."

A brighter side of the picture, however, was given when the admiral said that in perhaps the hardest fighting the Allies have had against submarines—the convoys to Russia—the great majority of suppy ships have come safely through.

Noble lauded the "superhuman efforts" which have resulted in the "reconstruction of the United States Fleet in the Pacific in the year following the disaster at Pearl Harbor" and our successes against the Japs to date. He looked forward to the day when the Battle of the Atlantic is won.

"Then the British Navy will join the American froces in the Pacific and crush the Japs," he said.

Reds Picture Bright

Davis, at a press conference, termed the Russian military situation the brightest in the entire world picture, but he warned gravely about the U-boats.

"The submarine campaign is bad and will stay bad for a long time," he said. "Submarines concentrate in groups along convoy lines, and sometimes they get through. Losses reported so far in January are heavier—not a great deal but somewhat—than for the same number of days in December."

Admiral Sir Percy, a 63-year-old veteran naval officer who left his antisubmarine post only last November to head the British Admiralty delegation in Washington, deplored what he said was a belief by "the man in the street" both in England and America, that the U-boat menace was under control.

Progress Being Made

He said "satisfactory progress" is being made, but that it will be at least a few months before we will know whether we can beat the submarines.

"The Germans have turned their principal effort and production to this war under the seas," he said. "The Battle of the Atlantic goes on night and day. We cannot publish figures, but losses both of ships and submarines are heavy."

The admiral laid particular emphasis on escort vessels, of which he said the destroyer was the best type, as the antisubmarine weapon. He declared, however, that the work of these escort vessels must be synchronized with airplanes and that it will take the combined efforts of both to do the job.

He praised particularly, the crews on merchant ships, declaring that the people owe them a debt of gratitude which few appreciate. "Theirs is the hardest job of the war, and they certainly deserve all of the sea and air protection we can give them."

Roosevelt Urged To Halt Kaiser Shipyard Hearings

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP). — The American Federation of Labor executive council has urged President Roosevelt to halt a National Labor Relations Board hearing on the question of industrial relationships between three Henry J. Kaiser shipyards at Portland, Oreg., and about 65,000 employes.

In a telegram to Mr. Roosevelt, made public yesterday by A. F. of L. President William Green, the executive council said that "unless you intervene the production of ships will be curtailed and serious consequences may follow."

Kaiser Counsel Clashes

Portland, Oreg., Jan. 20 (AP).—Trial Examiner Robert N. Denham threatened yesterday to eject Harry F. Morton, Henry J. Kaiser's general counsel, from a National Labor Relations Board hearing into charges of unfair labor practices at three Kaiser shipyards.

As the hearing continued with routine testimony, Denham and Morton clashed after the examiner indicated that Kaiser attorneys were uncooperative.

"We're not going to stand by and be pilloried and have the case built against us," Morton declared.

Tojo Stalls Off Diet

By the Associated Press

The Tokyo radio announced yesterday, on the eve of the scheduled reconvening of the Japanese Diet, that Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo was ill and for that reason resumption of Parliament had been postponed until January 27.

The announcement indicated serious political friction behind the scenes, where Tojo is working to gather more power in his own hands.

A Domei broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said Tojo had a cold. The Rome radio said he had the grippe.

The reopening of the Diet always is devoted to ministerial statements of policy and is considered most important. A postponement is almost unprecedented; on past occasions deputies have spoken for ailing premiers.

The OWI pointed out that there have been reports that Tojo was assuming more and more dictatorial powers.

Axis broadcasts have reported his government had prepared two bills for the session, one of which would give him power to direct the actions of any of his ministers or act himself in their names if necessary. The other would give him supreme power over war production.

Experienced observers thought it possible that some of the few civilians remaining in the cabinet objected to this accretion of power to the premier, who also is war minister.

The Chungking radio, recorded by the FCC, quoted political observers in the Chinese capital as expressing belief that the Diet's postponement was "an indication of increasing crisis in the Japanese government."

★ YOUR DOLLARS CAN FIGHT—BUY WAR BONDS ★

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It seems now that the horse-followers of the country can take their horse racing or leave it. They haven't beaten any path to New Orleans despite the fact that the black-out of racing everywhere else has left the Fair Grounds track without competition.

POVICH

The average crowd at New Orleans these days is 3000, which is no more than a fair day at little Charles Town in the West Virginia hills. And the betting at New Orleans has been averaging only $113,000 daily, a figure that would set the Maryland track operators to wailing and sighing for a return of the good old days.

If you want to make a bet on a horse this winter, you've got to bet on a horse running at New Orleans because that's the only track in operation. But it would seem that folks aren't betting the horses much this winter, either at the track or in the bookie parlors.

Before the war, Bowie never used to quarrel about what, at first glance, seemed to be a shoddy deal in the Maryland racing dates, Bowie got the first two weeks in the spring and the last two weeks in the fall and always was under the threat of being snowed out any day. But Bowie subsisted very nicely on the come-back money that was funneled into its mutuel machines.

That come-back money flowed in from the big bookmakers who didn't want to hold all of the bets they took. Bowie, the only track operating in the East at the time, got a very tidy sum out of it. But the size of the daily betting at New Orleans indicates that the Fair Grounds track is getting precious little or none of that come-back betting from the bookies around the country.

It means either that the folks who follow the horses are too busy to bet during wartime, or that the bookies have little respect for their clients' judgment and are holding all their bets. Could be, too, that the betting is so light that the bookies are not afraid of a killing.

New Orleans racing is in far better hands than it was in the twenties when betting coups were frequent and bookmakers often refused to take a bet on Fair Grounds races. In the era of Al Capone, the mobs cleaned up handsomely on the Fair Grounds odds with a simple betting device.

They'd pick themselves an outstanding favorite at New Orleans where the betting was light, and get down on him heavily with bookies scattered across the country. Then by the simple expedient of dumping a couple of thousand dollars into the track mutuels on other horses in the race at the last minute, they could send their 4-to-5 shot zooming up to 10-to-1 in the final track odds and collect from the bookies at that figure. But a couple of killings like that killed their game.

Maybe Sammy Baugh is due an apology. He didn't run out on that charity game between the Redskins and the National League All Stars at Philadelphia on December 27, it is now reported. "Baugh was just careless," says League President Elmer Layden who announced his decision on the investigation of the Baugh case and then closed it.

The suspicion is that when Baugh missed his plane to Philadelphia, he was no more careless than the league which didn't do much about getting him to the scene of the game in time to guard against any transportation difficulties.

Layden says the bad publicity that followed Baugh's failure to appear is sufficient punishment for the player. Layden should have said that contritely. His own publicity since the affair hasn't been so hot.

Georgetown Crushes Loyola Quint, 68-42

Mahnken Big Star, Scores 26 Points

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Johnny Mahnken, Georgetown's 6-foot-8 center who has his good and bad nights, showed one of his best to the visiting Loyola of Baltimore courtmen last night as his 26 points helped the Hoyas beat the Mason-Dixon Conference champions, 68 to 42, in Tech gymnasium.

Mahnken, who left after the game for Newark to receive an award as one of the State's four outstanding athletes of last year, tapped in 12 field goals and a pair of foul shots. Most of his double-deckers were of the sensational variety. Big John threw them in while dancing away from the basket, over his head, over his shoulder, and he jammed them in with his big right paw as he leaped above the hoop.

Georgetown, without Billy Hassett, who was sent to the school infirmary immediately after the Temple game with a bad cold, was in complete command all the way, taking a 4-0 lead on a follow shot by Andy Kostecka and a hook shot by Lloyd Potolicchio in the first minute of play.

The Hoyas were leading 38-14, at halftime as Mahnken and Kostecka, with Danny Kraus' southpaw scoring tactics lending a hand, completely dominated. Loyola handled the ball well but did not start clicking on long shots until the second half.

The Hoyas had a 54-to-18 lead at one time in the second half but slowed up at this point as the Baltimoreans countered with a barrage by Barney Goldberg, one of the best college courtmen in the State, Frannie Bock, the team's high scorer, and Gene O'Conor, son of the Maryland Governor. Most of the Loyolans' baskets were on long shots while Georgetown worked the ball under the hoop for its points.

Georgetown's reserves, most of them all-city or State players from the Metropolitan New York area, played more than five minutes but could not click as a unit and Loyola reduced the margin against them. Mahnken's 26 points took scoring honors over Kostecka with 16 and Goldberg with 15. G. U.'s next opponent is Army Saturday at West Point, where they will try for their eleventh victory in 13 starts.

In the middle as usual, Pounds Haight, Post zero writer, is pictured above as he received a try-out with the Ice-Capades yesterday. He made a big impression—on the ice. He was about to get a job, too, when the union stepped in and refused to allow him to crush ice without a card. Swung into position and lowered by crane, our Mr. Five-By-Five was propped up with four-by-fours until the brave Iceca-Pets got into position. Baugh Cleared Of Ducking Benefit Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Sammy Baugh, the Washington Redskins' famed passing star, today was officially cleared of everything but "carelessness" by Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, for failure to appear with other Redskins in the service benefit game with the All-Stars at Philadelphia December 27.

Layden, in a formal 300 word statement, declared that investigation had proved conclusively Baugh intended to play; that he was really ill when he intended leaving his Rotan, Tex., home for Philadelphia, and that at the most "he (Baugh) may have been careless in delegating the duty of notifying the club officials."

Layden added that "the publicity and subsequent investigation attendant upon Baugh's failure to appear in Philadelphia is deemed sufficient punishment under the circumstances."

Baugh, whose passing skill elevated the Redskins to the professional championship over the Chicago Bears, had been ballyhooed as one of the featured attractions of the benefit game.

Widespread reports that Baugh had "run out" were unanimously denied by his teammates who said Baugh had made no remarks belittling the game or indicating that he would not play in it.

Md. Trackmen Favor Holding '43 Meets

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—Representatives of Maryland's four major race tracks, meeting today, agreed that racing in Maryland should be continued in 1943, provided it does not interfere with the war effort.

However, they said that the daily license fee levied by the State against each track should be changed to a percentage tax.

At present, a $6000 daily license fee is levied by the State against each track for each day of racing. The State also receives 2 per cent of all money which passes through pari-mutuel windows.

Representatives of the tracks said they expected to confer with the Maryland Racing Commission to discuss the whole situation in detail, and agree on legislation to help the tracks.

2000 See Ernie Dusek Rescue Himself From Yellow Mask

Staging a near-miraculous recoery from the third of a series of lethal Cobra clutches, bulky Ernie Dusek pinned the venomous Yellow Mask after 36 minutes of a grduge wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night which had approximately 2000 fans apoplectic.

The favored Dusek's victory came with startling suddenness after it appeared the hooded villain was the master. Reeling blindly in the throes of the "sleeper" hold, Dusek gave a shove against the ropes which unbalanced Mr. Mask. The two crashed to the canvas and Dusek escaped the grip to pin the Mask.

Fate and several other folk were instrumental in the hero's triumph. Chief assistant was Referee Casey Berger, who battled the Mask as valiantly and almost as consistently as did Dusek.

Not only did the veiled assassin battle the other two in the enclosure; once he scored a perfect kick at the expense of a pop vendor who had been taunting him. And again he tried vainly to tap an offending fan who possessed more paunch than judgment.

George Becker and Jack Kelly opened with a scientic stalemate in 30 minutes.—OSCAR ELDER.

Majors Pick July 13 for All-Star Tilt

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 20.—Meeting to adjust the major league baseball schedules to fit the new opening and closing dates set recently, Ford Frick, president of the National League, and William Harridge, president of the American, today agreed on Tuesday, July 13, for the All-Star spectacle at Philadelphia.

This was exactly a week later than the date previously set for the eleventh annual dream game, which will be played at Shibe Park under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Rescheduling the game was perhaps the easiest task that came before Harridge and Frick, who were called upon to improvise new features into this year's program in order to save transportation.

As agreed upon today, the two leagues will open their schedules on Wednesday, April 21, and close Sunday, October 3.

The Washington Senators, however, will be hosts to the Philadelphia Athletics at Griffith Stadium on Tuesday, April 20.

Opening games on April 21 will be:

American League
Washington at New York.
Boston at Philadelphia.
Chicago at St. Louis.
Detroit at Cleveland.

National League
New York at Brooklyn.
Philadelphia at Boston.
St. Louis at Cincinnati.
Pittsburgh at Chicago.

Jim Rausch, Gallagher Top Scorers

By Charles E. Wallace
A Special Correspondent

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 20.—George Washington's advancing Colonials won their fifth straight basketball game of the season here this afternoon from a scrappy West Point team. The score was 57 to 48, and though the visitors were always ahead they ran into a wee bit of trouble toward the close of the second half.

The score at half time was 33 to 19 in favor of the Colonials. Jim Rausch, currently the squad's top scorer, and Capt. Joey Gallagher led the winner's attack with 15 and 12 points, respectively. Capt. Jamie Philpott was No. 1 man for the Cadets with his 15 points and unusual defensive play.

Coach Arthur Zahn's club was at its best in nearly every department. Zahn substituted freely and used every man brought on the trip. Army, likewise, used most of its available talent.

On shots from almost every angle big Ed Gustafson and Gallagher followed the stocky Indiana youngster with needed scoring punch and at the end of eight minutes, George Washington led, 11-1.

Rausch started off quickly with the opening of the second half when he sank one while standing close to the basket. Army's rally came after the half was five minutes old on baskets by Damon, Faas, Philpott and "Jug" Kenna.

After Referee Pat Kennedy sent Jim Myers out on fouls, the West Pointers pushed their score to 38, with 10 minutes left, and the Colonials appeared to be stalled with their 45 points. Gallagher and Don McNary did some fancy shooting at this point, however, and put their team out of danger.

Capital Bank Loans Decline $16,724,000

By S. Oliver Goodman

Outstanding loans of Washington's 22 banks shrank $16,724,000 in the last six months of 1942, according to a survey by Preston Delano, comptroller of currency.

Loans on December 31, 1942, aggregated $118,524,000, as compared with $135,248,000 on June 30, 1942, the report revealed. An even sharper drop was displayed for the entire year, loans at the end of 1941 totaling $144,649,000.

Other highlights of the comptroller's survey:

Investments of local banks in Government securities skyrocketed to $270,990,000 as of December 31, 1942. This compared with $144,-977,000 on June 30, 1942, and $110,-312,000 at the end of 1941.

Total assets aggregated $657,-455,000 against $568,871,000 at midyear and $548,044,000 at the end of 1941.

Total deposits soared to $604,-518,000, a new record, as compared with $515,932,000 at midyear and $495,554,000 at the end of 1941.

Surplus rose to $19,803,000, against $19,780,000 at midyear and $19,451,000 at the end of 1941. Undivided profits totaled $10,167,-000, against $9,521,000 at midyear and $9,395,000 at the end of 1941.

Reserves were $1,920,000, against $2,116,000 at midyear and $2,122,-000 at the end of 1941.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

C. B. Olds Heads Exchange

The Washington Stock Exchange yesterday elected Edson B. Olds as president, succeeding George M. Ferris, who became chairman of the board of governors. Mr. Olds is a partner in Brown, Goodwyn & Olds, local investment brokerage.

Harold C. Patterson of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, was elected vice president; James P. Nolan of Folger, Nolan & Co., secretary, and T. Baker Robinson of Robinson, Rohrbaugh & Lukers, treasurer.

Mr. Nolan and Myles H. Quail of Y. E. Booker & Co. were named to the board of governors. Other members of the board for the coming year are Mr. Ferris, Mr. Olds, Harold C. Patterson, Baker Robinson and Bernard J. Nees.

Club Hears John Reilly

John A. Reilly, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, spoke yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Insurance Club of Washington in the Lee-Sheraton Club.

"As a banker," said Mr. Reilly, "I feel that it is our solemn responsibility to furnish the lubrication for business and industry. Our primary job is to keep America strong . . . We must profit by our mistakes of the past. There is too much "emphasis on social security, especially on the material side. Some visionary people presuppose that humanity has lost its incentives . . ."

New Director Elected

James C. Wilkes, local attorney, was added to the board of directors of the Columbia Federal Savings and Loan Association at the annual meeting of members last night.

Clarence E. Kefauver, executive vice president and secretary, reported that the association netted $232,733 during 1942. Out of this sum, $192,809 in dividends was paid, leaving a balance of $89,924 for reserves and undivided profits account. Loans totaled $1,236,535 and total assets advanced to a new high of $7,563,375.

C. Gay Harrell was reelected president and all other officers and directors were reelected.

Controllers to Hear Dr. Read

Dr. Eaton V. W. Read, chairman of the War Production Board inventory control policy, will address members of the District of Columbia Control of the Controllers Institute of America on January 26 in the Carleton Hotel. Mr. Read will explain civilian goods inventory limitations.

New Bank Officer Named

William Norville Grimes, jr., has been elected an assistant real estate officer of the American Security & Trust Co., it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Grimes entered the employ of the bank in 1927, worked in various capacities until he became manager of the rental department. Born in Philadelphia, he received his education in Washington, having graduated from Eastern High School.

Power Output Holds Steady

Electric Power production held steady last week at a level just under that of the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported yesterday.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Civil Service Bans Prejudiced Resignations

Prejudiced resignations have been banned definitely, absolutely and unequivocally by the Civil Service Commission as of February 1. 'No doubt exists as to the policy of the commission. The language is plain and simple. It reads: "Effective February 1, 1943, departments shall discontinue the practice of reporting separations 'with prejudice' or 'without prejudice.'" This should wipe out the confusion and misunderstanding surrounding resignations. Agencies no longer will be able to hold the prejudice ax over the heads of their employes. The prejudice system simply didn't work and the commission admits it.

"From a review of resignations accepted 'with prejudice' during recent months," the commission stated, "it appears that sufficient serious consideration has not always been given to the rights of employes and the results of such actions on the possibilities of reemployment for these employes." The order doesn't mean that employes can't be fired from the service nor is it intended to protect persons guilty of serious misconduct or delinquencies. Guilty employes can be fired and kept from the service indefinitely. The effect of the order is to keep the good and efficient employe who resigns from being painted with the same brush as the weak and incompetent. It'll also open up the way for good employes who have resigned to reenter the service without too much red tape.

After February the agency that fires an employe for cause must state the reasons in letters to the employe and to the commission. The employe will be given an opportunity to answer the charges. The commission will decide whether the employe is to be barred from further Federal service. The commission has power to fix the time limit—one day to a lifetime—before an employe can take another Federal job. It was made clear in the commission announcement that failure of a satisfatcory employe to give advance notice "will not ordinarily be regarded as a basis for a bar to the employe's further employment in the Federal service." Two weeks is regarded by the commission as ample notice.

Employes seeking reinstatement or reappointment within 90 days of separation will be handled as direct transfers. And here's where the commission statement becomes a little fuzzy. Employes who break their promise to serve a longer period must wait at least 30 days before being reappointed. The commission will check the records of employes who resign and then seek reemployment. If an employe has a good work record and good reasons for resigning his job—no matter if it was in a top war agency or sleepy peacetime bureau—the commission, generally speaking, won't require more than a 30-day wait.

Federal Security Agency is investigating the effect of efficiency ratings on its employes. It's chiefly interested in cases where employes were given ratings two grades lower than they formerly received . . . The annuities of retired Federal employes are subject to the 3 per cent Victory Tax. That's the official decision of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Many retired employes are seeking reinstatement. They find it difficult to live on their small annuities . . . Navy invites all Federal employes to hear lectures on its make-your-room-a-home contest. Lectures are held in South Interior Auditorium every Tuesday at 8 o'clock.

SECRECY SCREWBALLS: The War Department recently sent an armed guard to Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics with its civilian employment figures which were labeled "confidential" in half a dozen places. Within a matter of hours the figures were made public by a War Department official . . . Employes in that super-duper secret agency, the Office of Strategic Services, recently planned to hold a dance. Some of the girls bought dresses. Boys arranged dates. The dance was called off. A number of reasons were given but many employes believed the officials thought OSS too secretive to hold a dance of its employes in a public place.

A super cabinet to run the war—both its military and domestic aspects—is definitely under consideration. Proposed for membership are James Byrnes, Judge Samuel Rosenman, who apparently would resign his New York judgeship; Admiral William Leahy, Harry Hopkins and Bernard Baruch. It's a fact that several war agencies have been asked to comment on such a plan. However, some of the people closely connected with it say final clearance hasn't been given by the President. They seem to think that the President is favorably inclined toward the idea.

1000-Mile Victory Garden

Chicago (A.P.).—The Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad today invited its employes to plant a 1000-mile-long victory garden along its tracks this spring. Officials said use of the land would be donated and all crops raised would become the property of employes doing the tilling.

Helpful Bad News

Holders of several hundred million dollars worth of German international bonds were assured yesterday that the Bureau of Internal Revenue considers them worthless paper.

This is not entirely bad news, because if the Government did not recognize the worthlessness, holders could not deduct the loss in figuring income taxes.

Criticism Leads OCD Unit to Quit

Mid-City Executive Committee Resents Tucker's Charge It 'Failed to Do Job'

Stung by criticism of their failure to raise $7500 in voluntary contributions to staff the Midcity Area Civilian Defense Headquarters, the executive committee of that group resigned in a body yesterday.

Leonard L. Tucker, president of the District Council of Defense Committees, informed Midcity Chairman Theodore S. Grape that the committee had not done its job, according to Secretary Nathan M. Lubar. Tucker said last night he did not care to discuss the resignations.

Cost Them $100

At the same time the Metropolitan Headquarters had made it impossible for the committee to raise the funds by denying them the right to use wardens as solicitors, Lubar claimed. He said the five-man committee could not raise $7500, and had already spent more than $100 out of their own pockets.

The $7500 was to be used for a paid staff of three persons, two girls as secretaries and telephone operators in the daytime and a man on the telephone at night. Secretarial service is necessary, Lubar said, because no group of volunteers can keep up with the immense outpouring of OCD literature, orders, changed orders and suggested activities.

Fingerprint Cost

The Midcity Area, in the heart of the business section, does not have a telephone located in a private home so that 24-hour watches can be maintained without difficulty.

Among the expenses of the committee was the installation of fingerprinting equipment at the request of wardens who didn't wish to go to Metropolitan OCD Headquarters or the police station to have their fingerprints taken.

Resigning members are Grape, Bernard N. Siegel, vice chairman; Lubar, G. S. Johnson, George E. C. Hayes and John C. Bryan.

Anyway the OCD doesn't need an executive committee in each area, their secretary said.

Judge Upholds Seizing of D. C. Pinball Games

Open season on pinball machines was declared yesterday when Justice James M. Proctor of District Court refused an injunction brought by three operators of the machines to restrain police from seizing them.

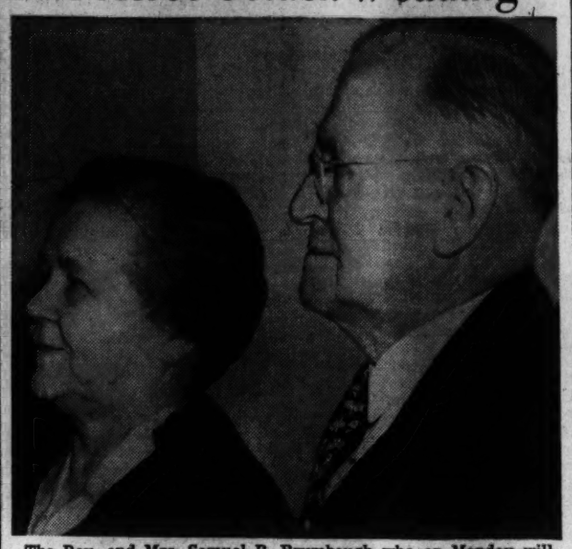
The operators contended that "free play for high scores did not make the machines gambling devices." The justice, however, ruled with the Government counsel who claimed that "free games are a thing of value," and therefore gambling devices in this case.

The three companies seeking the injunction were the Executive Novelty Co., 1613 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast; Washington Coin Machine Association, 1356 Rittenhouse Street Northwest and the Silet Sales System, 635 D Street Northwest.

The suit had been brought against Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police; Harvey G. Callahan, assistant superintendent, and District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

Immediately after the decision was rendered police were instructed by the District Attroney's office to vigorously restrict the operation of the machines throughout the District.

Rev. Mr. Brumbaugh and Wife To Observe Golden Wedding



The Rev. and Mrs. Samuel B. Brumbaugh who on Monday will mark their golden wedding anniversary

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Because gas rationing is keeping families at home, it is a disguised blessing, say the Rev. and Mrs. Samuel B. Brumbaugh, who celebrate a half-century of married bliss come Monday.

For the Brumbaughs, who have six living children and 18 grandchildren, the ideal happy marriage recipe is "plenty of children and plenty of work to do" and in giving everyone in the family, from Junior to Dad, a sense of homebuilding, physically and spiritually. "Gadding about" never built a happy homestead, they feel.

Seated in their cozy home at 8 Girard Street Northeast, the happy couple wouldn't say much about themselves. It was even up to the husband to mention that the wife has been teaching Sunday School classes in various places all their married life.

But their faces lit up, their eyes sparkled and their lips moved fast when they talked about "those wonderful children and grandchildren." Especially the one whose likeness adorned the piano top—Lieut. James D. Shields, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shields of Dayton, Ohio. Mrs. Shields is their oldest child.

Mr. Brumbaugh, who in 1941 retired from the checks section, General Accounting Office, after 22 years' service, is an ordained lay preacher in the University Park (Md.) Church of the Brethren. He teaches in the Washington Bible Institute and is treasurer of the Northeast Rescue Mission, 1340 H Street Northeast.

He and Mrs. Braumbaugh were married when he was 21 and she 19, and he was teaching school in Darke and Montgomery counties, near Dayton, Ohio.

Mrs. Brumbaugh claims distant relationship to George Washington. Mr. Brumbaugh is distantly related to the late Pennsylvania Governor, Martin J. Brumbaugh, also one-time superintendent of Philadelphia schools and of the State's schools. One of the local couple's sons is James P. Brumbaugh, Washington Post circulation manager for Annapolis, Md.

The Samuel Brumbaughs will have a busy weekend. The Brethren Church, led by the Rev. J. B. Long, will fete them Sunday morning; their family will gather about them for Sunday dinner and a golden wedding dinner Monday, and young people of Mrs. Brumbaugh's Sunday school class will drop in Sunday night.

D. C. Boys Club Holds Annual Elections

The fifty-seventh annual meeting of the Boys Club of Washington was held at the Willard Hotel last night with Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the board of trustees, presiding.

Reports on the various activities of the club during the year were reported by Dr. Chester D. Swope, president, while vice presidents, L. Emory Hutchison, Charles H. Cooke and Charles P. Maloney, reported on the Georgetown, Eastern and Central branch clubs, respectively.

The nominating committee, through its chairman, A. F. E. Horn, presented nominees for officers for 1943. Elected unanimously, they are:

Trustees for reelection—David A. Baer, William L. Bush, Maj. Gen. Fred Coleman, James A. Dent, Howard P. Foley, J. Louis Gundling, Albert F. E. Horn, Charles P. Maloney, J. Willard Marriott, Eugene Meyer, Alfred G. Neal, Llewellyn Nicolson, J. Louis O'Connor, J. Benton Webb, Howard L. Wilkins.

New Ration Aides Named

Deaths this date last year .. 7
District total last year 108

Struck by a hit-and-run driver last Sunday, Marybelle Mozelle, Negro, 25, of 1025 Thirteenth Street Southeast, died at Casualty Hospital at 3 p. m. yesterday.

Police said the woman was crossing M Street Southeast at Fourth about 6:45 p. m. Sunday and was hit by an eastbound automobile. Witnesses said the impact knocked her 30 feet into the air.

The car sped away, it was said, and so far police have made little progress in apprehending the driver. The woman was the second victim of a hit-run motorist this year. Paul Higgins, 57, of Soldier's Home, was killed January 1 in an alley at Eighteenth and Kenyon Streets Northwest. Driver of the machine which struck him also is at liberty.

Meanwhile it was announced by Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller that enforcement of new Saturday afternoon parking and one-way street regulations necessitated by the Government's working hours will begin this week.

Although enforcement of the new statutes was due to start last Saturday, motorists were granted a week's grace to familiarize themselves with the new rules. All parking laws effective during the week will apply on Saturdays, it was said.

One-way traffic will move on the following streets:

Waterside Drive—From Massachusetts Avenue south to Rock Creek Park boundary for southbound traffic only from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and for northbound traffic only from 4 to 6:30 p. m.

First Street Northwest—From Massachusetts Avenue to H Street for northbound traffic only at all times; from H Street to Michigan Avenue for northbound traffic only between 4 and 6:30 p. m.

Sixth Street Northwest—From Florida Avenue to Indiana Avenue for southbound traffic only from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and from Indiana Avenue to Florida Avenue for northbound traffic only between 4 and 6:30 p. m.

Twelfth Street Northwest—From Pennsylvania Avenue to Vermont Avenue for northbound traffic only between 12 noon and 6 p. m.

Thirteenth Street Northwest—From Arkansas Avenue to Logan Circle one-way for southbound traffic from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and one-way for northbound traffic from 4 to 6:30 p. m.

Seventeenth Street Northwest—From Rhode Island to Florida Avenues for northbound traffic only from 4 to 6:30 p. m.

Sundays and holidays, Inspector Miller warned, will be the only days on which the regulations will not be enforced.

Contract Is Let For Md. Hospital

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Z. M. Fowler, president of the board of directors of St. Marys County Hospital, said the contract for construction of a new 32-bed addition to the present structure had been awarded to William Suttle, a Pennsylvania contractor.

Suttle's bid was $89,900, Fowler said, adding that he did not know when construction would begin.

Work Is Started on Overtime And D. C. Pay Raise Bills

The Senate yesterday turned its attention to Federal pay legislation on two fronts, with announcements that work is going forward on a new United States overtime bill and on measures to increase the pay of District police, firemen and teachers.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, new chairman of the Civil Service Committee, said that he had asked Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, to start preparation of a new Federal pay bill at once.

The measure would replace the temporary overtime bill, enacted in the closing moments of the Seventy-seventh Congress, which is due to expire on April 30.

Downey said that he did not know what form or scope the measure would have. He added that personally he would favor a bill which excluded the postal workers—given a flat 10 per cent raise under the current temporary law—and place them under separate legislation.

Meanwhile, McCarran outlined a proposed revision of the police, fire and teachers pay bills which he will lay before an executive session of the District Committee for study this morning.

His proposal will be worked out into a percentage formula, but in effect will give an increase of about $350 to all employes in the three groups whose salary would not be boosted above $5000 a year by the increase.

The pending bills give police and firemen raises ranging between $380 for a rookie private and $480 per a veteran sixth-year private and all ranks above that. The school bill would grant 15-per cent increases for teachers and attendance department workers, with 10 per cent given to higher salared Board of Education employes on the $3500 portion of their annual pay.

D. C. Area Still Without Ration Chief

Leary Undecided Upon Successor; Fuel Oil Situation Worse as Cold Sets In

The District still was without a State rationing officer last night, as Whitney Leary, District OPA director, said he had not decided upon a successor to L. P. Steuart, "relieved of his duties" Tuesday.

Leary said he had several persons in mind and would make a statement concerning his choice within a few days.

The District oil situation, meanwhile, assumed an even more critical aspect with the advent of colder weather. Dealers said supplies were "tight" and Lester Scott, fuel-oil consultant for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said a survey of existing supplies showed the situation little improved over this time last week.

Scott said that even with the prospect of increased supplies there seemed little hope that no suffering would result from cold if the present cold snap lasted. Consumption has been greater than deliveries for the past five or six weeks, he said, and an extended cold spell will cause many consumers to run out at the same time, and put a new delivery load on dealers.

The anthracite strike has proved a new blow to the local heating situation, but a far from drastic one. At worst it will mean that the city will have more smoke pouring from its chimneys as more bituminous coal is burned.

Some dealers now are entirely out of the more popular screens of hard coal. Egg, stove, chestnut and pea sizes are especially hard hit and some time will be needed to replenish stocks when the strike ends—so the shortage probably will be extended into next week.

Order Restrains Sinclair Refining

New York, Jan. 20 (A.P.).—Federal District Judge Samuel Mandelbaum today signed a temporary restraining order against the Sinclair Refining Co. on an Office of Price Administration complaint.

The restraining order was accompanied by an order, returnable Friday for argument, requiring the company to show cause why a permanent injunction should not be issued.

The complaint accused the company of following a policy of discrimination among dealers and suppliers entitled to acquire fuel oil under the terms of the ration order.

Women's Rights Ammendment On Slate Today

The equal rights amendment to the Constitution, aimed at putting women on a completely equal footing with men throughout the Nation, is scheduled for introduction in the Senate today by Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa.

Gillette, together with more than a score of his colleagues, is sponsoring the amendment resolution which is identical with one brought into the House two weeks ago by Representatives Guyer (Republican) of Kansas and Ludlow (Democrat) of Indiana.

The resolution, popularly known as the "Lucretia Mott Amendment," would simply specify that "men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction." Congress would have power to enforce the provision "by appropriate legislation."

Postlude By Ray C. B. Brown.

2d Beethoven Festival Concert By Kindler Is Impressive

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the second concert of a Beethoven Festival on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloists: Emma Beldan, soprano; Jean Handzlik, contralto; John Hamill, tenor; Howard Vanderburg, basso. Program: "Leonore" Overture No. 3, Symphony No. 9 in D minor. Chorus composed of Washington Choral Society, George Washington University Glee Club, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church Choir, and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church Choir from Baltimore.

No more impressive and stimulating performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony has been given in Washington than the one conducted last evening by Hans Kindler. It was one of those happy occasions when a conductor's insight and zeal combined to elicit from orchestra, soloists and chorus the utmost of their consentient efforts to read the work as he wished it to sound. Apparently the result was highly satisfactory to Dr. Kindler himself, for he took some time to congratulate the musicians before turning to acknowledge the applause resounding in Constitution Hall. As for the auditors, their verdict was pronounced in a prolonged ovation. Fortunate, indeed, is the National Capital in having an orchestra of its own capable of so excellent an accomplishment.

BROWN

The success of the performance held a pang of disappointment for one young local artist, Juanita Carter, who was prevented by illness from appearing as soprano soloist. Her place was taken by Emma Beldan, so that the solo quartet was still all-American and all-Philadelphia Opera Company, the others being Jean Handzlik, John Hamill and Howard Vanderburg. Individually and collectively, they were able exponents in a difficult assignment, for Beethoven had no mercy on the human voice when he wrote the choral finale. The large and effective chorus was a combination of the Washington Choral Society, the George Washington University Glee Club, the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church choir and the choir from Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church in Baltimore.

The idea of a choral finale to a symphony was not entirely new in Beethoven's day, for it had already been used by at least two composers, Peter van Winter and Vincenz Masek. Beethoven himself had employed a chorus in a previous orchestral work, the fantasia for piano, Opus 80. But for the ninth symphony he enlarged the scope of the vocal elements enormously in order to form a billow of emotion for the joyous climax. As Beethoven conceived this symphony, it was absolutely essential to his plan that voices should proclaim the ideal of human brotherhood.

To critics who have assailed the validity of the last movement, the most definite answer was made by Donald Francie Tovey: "There is no part of the ninth symphony which does not become the clearer to us for assuming that the choral finale is right; and there is hardly a point that does not become difficult and obscure as soon as we fall into the habit of assuming that the choral finale is wrong." A careful study of the score justifies this pronouncement.

Victory Sidelights

Cagney to Arrive Next Week For Birthday Ball Festivities

James Cagney, president of the Screen Actors Guild, will represent Warner Brothers at the Washington Celebration of the President's Birthday January 29 and 30.

He will lead the Hollywood delegation scheduled to arrive in Washington on January 28. Cagney and the other visiting stars will appear at the midnight shows at the Earle, Capitol and Howard Theaters and also at events being arranged especially for servicemen.

Second 'Gas Class' For Doctors Set

The second session of a course for physicians on the medical aspects of chemical warfare will be held at headquarters of the District Medical Society, 1718 M Street Northwest, tomorrow at 8:15 p. m.

Speakers will be Chester E. Leese, associate professor of psysiology, George Washington University School of Medicine; Michael J. McInerney, associate clinical professor of medicine, Georgetown University School of Medicine; Richard H. Meredith, fellow, Georgetown, and Harold O. Hofmeyer, supply officer, chemical and medical supplies for the government of the Union of South Africa.

AWVS to Open Course In Motor Transport

An intensive training course in motor transport work will begin Monday at the American Women's Voluntary Services headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue Northwest, where applications are now being received. Classes will be held on Mondays through Fridays, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

New North Randle Sector Posts Open

Four new sector posts in Zone A of the North Randle Area, equipped by residents of the Greenway Development Section, opened for public inspection last night. The posts will also be open today, 8 to 10 p. m.

OCD Training Resumes Jan. 27

"In service" training of civilian defense control centers and protective services, discontinued during the holidays, will be resumed January 27, Capt. Herbert A. Friede, controller of communications of the local OCD, announced yesterday.

Model Defense Ordinance Published by OCD

A "Model Ordinance of Civilian Defense Organization, published yesterday by the OCD, gives broad emergency powers to the commander of the Citizens Defense Corps, with charge of not only emergency protective services but also regular municipal services.

Under the recommended ordinance, legal status is given to the local defense council, the United States Citizens' Defense Corps and the Citizens Service Corps.

$7000 in War Bonds Sold in One Hour

What is believed a record sale of $7000 worth of war bonds in an hour was set by the Soroptimist Club at a bonds-for-victory luncheon in the Willard Hotel yesterday. Hugh Lynch, administrator of the war bond division of the Treasury Department told the group he believed that no other local women's club had made such a record.

Frederick P. H. Siddons, vice president of the American Security & Trust Co., discussed the importance of the current campaign to convert partially filled stamp albums sinto war bonds. During the past year club members have purchased $100,000 worth of bonds, an average of about $1250 per member.

Ration Board Tempers Gas Ban Decisions

OPA Officials Allege 34 More Violations, Police 5, Making a Grand Total of 644

While the numbers of alleged violators of the pleasure ban mounted yesterday, justice was meted out temperately to those called before ration board to answer for their questioned driving.

Spokesmen of the District OPA reported 34 additional cases and police added five to this, bringing the total to 644.

At Board 60, in Ketchum School, Fifteenth and Good Hope Road Southeast, last night one driver was penalized a coupon of his "B" book, three cases were dismissed, and five others, two of which appeared on speeding charges, are to be notified today of the action taken. Another driver charged with speeding failed to make an appearance.

Police Car Included

Nils Gunner Karlsson, 23 Eighth Street Southeast, who works on a defense project at Camp Springs, Md., was assessed the 3-gallon ration ticket for driving his fiancee from the Agriculture Building, where she works, to Silver Spring in search of an apartment.

One of the cases dismissed involved Pvt. Francis X. Cleary of the police department whose car was listed while he was directing traffic at Seventeenth and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. He appeared at the board with a letter from the captain of his precinct stating he was on duty.

The three to be notified of the disposition of their cases are Thomas M. David, 2505 Park Place Southeast; J. F. Davitt, 449 Mellon Street Southeast, and Jesper B. Williams, 1609 Seventeenth Place Southeast.

The two who appeared on the speeding charges were Mrs. Eunice Wright, 1214 S Street Southeast, and William Smith, 2335 Ainger Place Southeast. Marcelline F. Wathen, 2015 Branch Avenue Southeast, failed to appear on a speeding charge.

Board 50 Notifies Three

Three drivers were notified to appear at Board 50, Southwest Library, Seventh and I Streets Southwest, but only one case was acted on. One person notified did not appear and the other was asked to return with additional information today.

Augusta Jones, Negro, of 406 Twenty-first Street Northwest, explained that on the night of January 10 he was driving his 14-year-old niece home. He said that she was not familiar with Washington and could not find her way by streetcar. Jones was stopped by Officer Ralph Harper at 9 p. m. and held in the station house over night for investigation, he stated. The following morning he was released, he said.

Thomas P. Brown, chairman of the board said:

"We concluded that he had had sufficient punishment and therefore we will not penalize him any further. He volunteered himself not to use his car for the next 10 days."

8 Proven Innocent

Board 31, at the Petworth Library, Georgia Avenue and Upshur Street Northwest, disposed of eight alleged violations before the hearing. The eight were proven innocent and there was no need for their appearing, Edward Hillyer, board chairman stated.

Harold Mathis, 4406 Seventh Street Northwest, who admitted violating the ban by driving to Turner's Arena the night of January 8 was told by Hillyer:

"As you admit you violated the regulation we are going to warn you that the Government is going to take drastic steps to enforce this rule. We're willing to just ask you this time as a patriotic duty to live up to the rule and help win the war."

Edmond B. Ault, 1409 Nicholson Street Northwest, explained to the board that the night of January 10, when he was charged with a violation, he had been suffering with a bad cold and drove to the drugstore to obtain the necessary medicines. The board dismissed his case.

News in Brief of the Wartime Capital

Sale to the public of wheat flour, corn meal, buckwheat and other products ground at historic Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park will be discontinued immediately because effective OPA ceiling prices make it impossible to sell without a loss, Capt. F. W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, announced yesterday.

The mill, first established in 1820 and operated by the association since 1936, will continue in operation but hereafter the meal and flour ground there will be used exclusively in the preparation of meals served at the cafeterias operated in Government buildings by the association.

Citizen Unit Favors More Pay for 3 Groups

The Lincoln Civic Association last night went on record urging increased pay for District policemen, firemen and school teachers, at its regular meeting in Francis Junior High School.

The unit also proposed that the annual educational quiz contest be confined to eligible pupils from Francis Junior High School and the Stevens andd Briggs-Montgomery elementary schools. E. F. Harris presided.

65 New Trolleys To Arrive in July

Sixty-five of the one hundred streamlined streetcars ordered last year by the Capital Transit Co. will appear on Washington streets sometime in July, officials announced yesterday. The new cars have been released by the WPB.

Addition of the new vehicles, which will cost $19,500 each, will bring to 895 the number of trolleys available here next summer. There are 319 modern cars in use at present.

Girl, 5, Collects 1007 Keys as Salvage

Charlene Tate, 5, daughter of Pvt. Carl T. Tate, station clerk at the First Precinct Station, knows where to look when she wants to add to her key salvage trove. Her class at Congress Heights School started a key salvage campaign and Charlene is far in the lead with 1007 keys. Most of them were solicited from the force and auxiliary stationed at the First Precinct. Strung on a wire, they stretch 7 feet.

Arrest of D. C. Man May Solve Crimes

Police believe they solved eight housebreakings and a grand larceny when they arrested Richard E. Carter, 18, Negro, 15 N Street Southeast. Carter was arrested Sunday when Pvt. Oliver T Coffin found him emerging from a store at 760 Eleventh Street Southeast and confessed to the eight housebreakings and larceny. He was charged last night. Strangely enough, the larceny took place October 25 at the place he was arrested Sunday.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT: The Light Fantastic

Do you stumble and shuffle on the dance floor? Do you smudge the shine on your partner's shoes? Or do you stick to the Big Apple because that was what they were doing in Chillicothe when you left it? Wising up to the antics of the 1943 jitterbug or swooper-dooper is really a simple and painless procedure. Even if you know the ropes, a little more practice and a few new steps will be a boon to your social graces—and help mightily to solve your manpower shortage.

Investigate the possibilities of the ballroom dancing classes sponsored by the District Department of Recreation, for instance. These are held at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest, and are free to war workers and servicemen. Call ADams 2050 and arrange to join the crowd, which congregates every Friday at 8.

Lessons in tap dancing, rumba and conga are available at Banneker Recreation Center for Negro war workers every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night at 8, also free, also sponsored by the D. D. of R. Call Mr. Cole at ADams 2050.

If you're the shy type, you can have private instruction by appointment for about 50 cents a lesson (depending on income) at Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast. Call LIncoln 6202 and your stumbling days will be over.

The USO Club at 1814 N. Street Northwest (sponsored by the National Catholic Community Service) has an eye to both day and night workers by holding classes Thursday from 1 to 2:30 p. m. and Friday from 7:30 to 9 p. m. Both men and women may attend and it's all for free. Telephone NAtional 0614 and you're in.

Is good, healthy corn your idea of fun? Square dancing is coming into its own in Washington, not only for the pure joy of it, but because it stirs up the circulation where desk-chair rigor mortis begins to set in. If you do not know a promenade from a grand right and left, lose no time in getting over to one or many of these:

Lessons for those who want to go about it systematically—Roosevelt High School, Thursdays at 8, open to all war workers and servicemen and free; Service Men's Club No. 1 at 306 Ninth Street Northwest, same time, day, people and price.

For those who want to jump in head first, beginners are welcomed at the following square dances: Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, Wednesdays, 8:30 to 10:30 (25 cents); Friendship House, first Monday of the month at 8:30 (35 cents) and first and third Saturdays, 8 to 11:30 p. m. (free); USO Club, 1814 N Street Northwest, Tuesdays at 7:30 (free); Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., Thursdays at 8 (free to any Negro war worker or serviceman); Jewish Community Center, Wednesdays at 8:30 p. m.

Would you like to be lithe and graceful as a gazelle? Consider modern dancing as a means to this end, for it is extra-special exercise as well as fun. Interpretive dancing of this type develops rhythm and poise, even while trimming off those bumps and rolls.

The Jewish Community Center at Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest offer all female war workers modern dance classes on Wednesdays—7:30 p. m. for beginners, 8:30 p. m. for advanced students. The fee is $5 a semester for women who are not members of the center. Membership (which gives free access to most of the center's activities) costs $10. Night workers can attend the "early birds" modern dance classes at 10:30 a. m. Wednesdays. Call DUpont 6162 to register.

Interpretive and rhythmic dancing classes are held at Friendship House, Mondays from 7 to 8 p. m. at 10 cents per lesson.

Women Marines??

By Anne Hagner

"Say, I hear that these WAMS are going to have the snappiest uniforms in the armed services," said the man with the large, crooked cigar.

"WAMS? What on earth are WAMS?" we demanded.

"Women's Auxiliary of the Marines," he replied, in a why-didn't-you-know? tone.

"Oh, is that what they are planning to call them?"

"I don't know," he said. "I just made it up."

Which is only a fraction of the dozen-odd rumors that are running about the Nation's Capital about the feminine Marines, which at the moment are veiled in deep secrecy until proper legislation is enacted to bring them into actuality.

The prospective head, one can learn very unofficially, has been chosen. She remains 100 per cent anonymous, her identity concealed far better than that of any of the other heads of women's branches—"inkled" on every side, in every column long before they were announced.

Most likely bit of rumor-mongering about the intended nickname for the unit is that its members will be called MARS—short for Marines, bearing the initials of Marine Auxiliary Reserve Service.

Gossip hath it that the only other possibility with the letters at hand was rejected wholeheartedly by everybody concerned—the MAWS, standing for Marine Auxiliary Women's Service. Recruiting officers' difficulties under such a tag are obvious.

One thing is certain: the ladies who have turned their backs upon WAVES, WAACS, and SPARS, with the claim that they are waiting for the Marines to begin accepting womenfolk, now will desert their civilian tasks with an elacrity that will make the recruiting force work many hours overtime. Because, as the feminine contingent from Alexandria to the Stage Door Canteen keeps proclaiming—there's nothing like the Marine Corps.

That Wild Arnold Girl

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

The story thus far: Jenny Arnold understands herself well enough to know that most of her brassy, wise-cracking modernism is a defensive front against the petty scheming of her older sister, Madeline; the middle-aged and embarrassing foibles of her mother, Celia, who is currently enamored of the oily young dancing master, Tony Torrento; and the heartache she feels because of her father's consistent failure to understand her or to return the genuine affection she feels for him. Even to Bud Nelson, who is in love with her, Jenny never reveals her true feelings. Only when she meets Bill Winslow, Madeline's new flame, does she realize that her cultivated hardness is only skin deep—and that she can, whether she wants to or not, actually fall in love. She is jerked abruptly out of such thoughts, however, when she sees her mother in a tawdry night spot with Torrento.

Chapter IX

In the roadster as they drove off she was aware of his silent bewilderment.

"I forgot to introduce you to Bill Winslow," she said in a muffled voice, "but I guess you've met him."

"I've never really been introduced," Bud said, "but I knew who he was. Anyway, it doesn't matter."

"He's Bill Winslow—you know—Harvard, polo ponies, all that. He's visiting the Ames's. That's where Madeline met him."

"Oh is he? I thought he was doing some work for Judson Ames on defense orders at the plant."

Jenny scarcely heard what Bud was saying, her mind rushing on with her own thoughts. "Madeline's nuts about him, and I guess he is about her, too," she said, trying to sound light and casual.

They drove in silence for a time. Jenny could imagine just what Madeline was saying to Bill. Probably apologizing some more. "You mustn't mind Jenny. I don't know why she's so different from the rest of us. And besides she's really quite nice—" Hinting at that old axiom, "There's something good in the worst of us," that sort of thing.

As a matter of fact Madeline was saying something of that sort but Bill wasn't listening very attentively. He was worrying about something else. He knew that tonight he ought to tell Madeline Arnold the truth about himself, that she had confused him with his cousin, the one who'd been to Harvard and had a yacht and a string of polo ponies, and who was always going off on explorations. He had meant to tell her this morning, but he'd gotten confused because he'd met Jenny Arnold. He didn't know why meeting her had confused him, but it had. And it had also for some strange reason made him reluctant to tell Madeline who he really was. Maybe he was afraid he wouldn't be welcome at the Arnold's any more. But on second thought that was ridiculous. Madeline wasn't that sort.

Madeline Scores

"I've been so worried about father lately," she was confessing sweetly. Her china blue eyes lifted to his were troubled like a child's. "And Jenny doesn't seem to notice that he looks so—troubled all the time."

Bill felt a surge of tenderness. His arm tightened about her. Yes, he thought, this was the sort of a girl a man ought to find for himself, kind, thoughful, not a wild, selfish harridan who would—but why should he keep thinking about Jenny. He'd been brushing her out of his thoughts all day, even when he was with Madeline.

"It must be something terribly important you're thinking about," Madeline said sweetly.

He came to with a start, grinned down at her. "Nothing of the least importance, I assure you," he said.

Meanwhile Bud and Jenny were in the smoky dimness of the Club El Toreador. Bud had little to say until they were seated in the corner of the table he'd reserved. Then he said, "But for heaven's sake, Jenny, what happened? Why that get-up and this joint?"

Jenny winced. She, too, had been very much aware of the raised eyebrows and half-suppressed masculine whistles that had followed the progress of the silver lame gown through the crowded night club to their table. She had felt horribly ashamed of the dress.

"You're not letting that business of seeing your mother with Torrento get the better of you—I hope?"

Jenny smiled wanly, shook her head.

Bud's expression turned eager. "Have you been thinking about what I asked you last night? I've thought of nothing else all day."

Jenny shook her head again.

"As soon as I get my pilot's license I'm going to join the Navy. I'll be leaving one of these days——"

"Oh, Bud, darling, I will miss you!" Jenny was in earnest about that.

"I hope you will, Jenny, enough so that when I come back—after this business is all finished up—the war, I mean——"

Jenny reached across the table and put a slim brown hand on one of his. "I'll remember that you asked me, and we can write."

They were silent for a time. Suddenly Jenny said, "I don't know what's's the matter with me, honestly. I'm all unstrung. I say hateful things that I don't mean to people I really love. And I have a horrid feeling that I'm not getting anywhere, that I'm just marking time, wasting life!"

A blare of trumpets from the orchestra signaled the beginning of the floor show and Jenny had another shock.

"Why, it's Torrento!" she whispered. "I didn't know he put on a show here."

Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

Despite the fact that the Women Fliers of America, Inc., had their wings clipped last August by the Government's ban on civilian flying, they are carrying on in high spirits. At least the Washington Chapter is plenty active.

Instead of taking to the air, for the time being, the aviation enthusiasts are learning everything about the science of aviation on the ground. For the past six months the group has been faithfully studying civil air regulations, theory of flight and navigation, under the instructorship of Lewis Prout.

Tonight the Women Fliers start a class in meteorology at 8 o'clock at Central High School. Anyone interested in the course should report to Miss Thelma Meyers, chairman, at the Roger Smith Hotel, or go directly to the class.

That isn't all. Next Tuesday the Washington chapter is offering a course in Morse code. This is scheduled for 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Graff, 1736 Irving Street Northwest. Moreover, Mrs. Graff has persuaded her husband, Arnold Graff, to do the teaching. Recently Mr. Graff returned from an extended period of service as pilot in the African ferry service and is temporarily in Washington with the Air Transport Command.

Lack of time, not enthusiasm, prevents the group from scheduling more than two courses for the same period. However, celestial navigation and the study of engines—also their maintenance—are next on the program, according to Elizabeth C. Kelly, chairman of the group's education committee.

But make no mistake—the women fliers' eyes stray from the compass occasionally to whip up a few social activities. The entertainment committee, under the direction of Mrs. Gail Waggoner, has planned parties for St. Valentine's and St. Patrick's Days. In April there is to be a dinner party, followed by a showing of aviation films. Then in May it's an outdoor picnic and in June a formal dance.

The Boys Eat Well

Mothers, stop worrying about your soldier boy's food. Be he in Africa or the Arctic regions his nutritional needs are well taken care of. This comes from no less authorities than Miss Mary Barber, food consultant to the Secretary of War, assigned to Quartermaster General's Office, and Miss Ina Lindman, recently appointed food consultant to the Navy.

MISS BARBER MISS LINDMAN

Speaking before members of the D. C. Dietetic Association and the District Home Economics Association early this week at a joint meeting held at the Washington Gas Light Co., Miss Lindman outlined the history of the Navy ration from the time of the Navy's establishment to the present and Miss Barber talked on "Special Rations for Our Army."

"Our Navy has kept pace with the developments in nutrition," declared Miss Lindman.

"It is satisfying to know that nothing is being left undone to see that our troops, whether they are going to the jungles or the mountains, to the Arctic or to the tropics, have specially prepared food in specially packed boxes" said Miss Barber, "so you see they still can have a well balanced diet."

Then she went on to point out that if at the end of the war our boys return to us in a good state of health and have formed the habit of eating well balanced diet every day, dieticians and nutritionists will have made a contribution not only to the war effort but to better food habits for the future.

Both speakers are members of the American Dietetic Association and Miss Barber is a past president of the organization.

Youth Aliyah

Answer to Hitler's declaration of war on the Jews is Youth Aliyah Committee of Hadasssah, explained Miss Gisela Warburg, national chairman of the Youth Aliyah Committee.

Guest speaker at a meeting of Washington Chapter of Hadassah held Tuesday afternoon, she said that since the organization—Aliyah Committee—tried to help a group of children between the ages of 15 and 17—the ages when they were most likely to be placed in concentration camps—this forestalled Hitler's fiendish plans. Also, that it was an age group that no other organization had attempted to help.

G. A. R. Unit Installs

Mrs. Charlotte W. Stumph was installed as president of U. S. Grant Circle, No. 1, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, at a recent meeting of the group.

Doings of the Day

Miss Ruth Mitchell gives an informal talk on her experiences with the Chetnik organization in Yugoslavia before the members of the ENGLISH-SPEAKING UNION OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington Branch, at 1 o'clock luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel. Walter Tuckerman, president presides. ALL STATES CLUB of the Y. W. C. A. holds dinner meeting 5:30 p. m. followed by program at 7. Joseph Cahn of the War Hospitality Board is chairman of a panel discussion, "Washington Affected by War."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

Trump contracts can blow up even when the trump suit is well supported. Consider today's hand, played in one of the side-line games of the winter national tournament at Syracuse, N. Y. It certainly looks as if East could make his contract of three spades, losing a trick in each suit. But good defense nipped East's bid for down one when North made one of his trumps through a ruff.

G. Eloise Neil, Columbus, Ohio, bridge writer, was the alert South. Miss Neil, whom we met at Syracuse for the first time, is a friendly, efficient and natural player.

It happened that Dr. Louis Mark, Columbus master and Miss Neil's partner in national open-pair championships, was the declarer on this hand, and so there was a special zest in winning the set.

The club four was opened: North took with the ace and sent back the diamond five. Dr. Mark, realizing that a ruff might be in the offing, refused the finesse, went up with the ace and led a low spade toward dummy.

But Miss Neil hopped right up with the spade ace, cashed the king of diamonds and played her last diamond, which North trumped with his jack of spades. Declarer later had to concede a heart trick, which put the three-spade contract down one East lost a club, the ace of spades, the king of diamonds, a diamond ruff and a heart trick.

Bean Casserole and Sherry Wine

MENU
*Bean Casserole Sherry Wine
Corn Bread Sweet Pickles
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Lemon Meringue Pie

This appetizing main dish requires practically no meat. Try it—using a little Sherry wine as the recipe directs. Ask your wine dealer for a Sherry that's fairly "dry" (not too sweet), and you'll find that small glasses of the same Sherry make a grand prelude to this dinner. Wine Advisory Board, San Francisco.

*TESTED RECIPE. Cut 2 strips bacon fine and fry crisp, or melt 4 tbsps. meat fryings; add 1 chopped onion and brown. Add 2 tbsps. brown sugar or molasses, ⅓ cup catsup, ½ cup Sherry wine. Mix in 4 cups drained cooked lima, kidney or navy beans. Bake 1 hour at 350° F. Serves 4 to 6.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is Woman Legally Wedded to Man With Whom She Exchanged Marriage Vows Seven Months Before His Divorce From His First Wife Became Final?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About eight years ago, when I was a young girl, I met a man who I thought would make a fine husband. He was married at the time, but had been separated from his wife for two years. After he had seen me a few times, he told me he was not divorced, but would get a divorce as quickly as possible. Knowing how people gossip about a girl going with a married man, I explained how I felt and we agreed not to see each other until he was divorced—which would be in about a year. In the meantime, I went with other men and he with other girls.

At the end of a year, he came to see me and told me he had gotten the divorce. We were married a week later. For the next six years, we were very happy; but in the seventh year, I suddenly became very unhappy and realized I didn't love him. After several months of trying to make up my mind what to do, I decided to leave him. I didn't want to make the break, as he was the same man I had married—very kind, very devoted and willing to do anything to make me happy. I didn't want to hurt him, but I felt I must go. When I left, I took wih me a metal box that my father had given me when I married—to hold valuable papers. After I had settled in my own apartment, I decided to "houseclean" this box and, in so doing, came across my husband's divorce papers. Then, for the first time, I saw they were dated almost seven months after our marriage! I thought there must be some mistake, so I sent for him to come over.

He said the divorce was supposed to have gone through two days before we were married; but was held up at the last minute, on account of some property settlement. He said he intended to tell me, at the time, so we could be married again; but later was afraid I might refuse, so he had let it go at that. The problem confronting me now is whether I have ever been his wife. If I should ever want to marry again, would I have to be legally freed from him? Or was our marriage void from the beginning? If it is unnecessary to go through legal proceedings to establish my single status, I would prefer not to see a lawyer. But I certainly don't want to be in the position of seeming to have flouted the law, either. I might add that I don't want any money from my husband, as I am well able to provide for myself. I would appreciate any information you can give me.

Complicated Question, Needing Legal Analysis

DEAR H. E. L.: Only a lawyer could help you establish a clean-cut definition of your current status—the principal reason being that the laws of different jurisdictions vary considerably, with regard to interpreting the obligations contracted by an innocent participant in irregular proceedings of the type described. For instance, I talked with two attorneys today, in an effort to get some light on your questions, and while both were tentatively of the opinion that you never were legally married to your "husband"—inasmuch as he was not legally qualified to contract marriage to you, when his divorce transaction was incomplete—both also touched on the possibility that you might subsequently have acquired the binding status of "common-law wife," provided you lived with him in a jurisdiction where this kind of connubial partnership gains legal sanction as a valid contract, which cannot be dissolved without judicial permission, after a man and woman have pledged themselves to each other as husband and wife, have maintained a shared domicile for a certain length of time, and have "put themselves forward" in the community as husband and wife.

However, I notice your letter bears the postmark of a Virginia suburb of Washington; and common-law marriage is not recognized in Virginia, so these spokesmen for the legal fraternity tell me. On the other hand, you may have become a resident of Virginia only recently, perhaps after abandoning your nominal "marriage." You may have started housekeeping with your husband (I suppose we must call him that, to simplify the discussion, whatever the legal analysis of the case) in a jurisdiction where common-law marriage is recognized; and may have lived with him there for the time necessary to validate the relationship. If so, you would have to be "legally freed" from him before you would have the right to marry again. But it is futile to dwell on mere speculation. The situation can only be clarified with the help of an attorney. And even an attorney would not venture an offhand definition of your standing. Careful inquiry into the history of the divorce transaction, as well as a thorough review of evidence attesting to your "marriage"—all assessed against the civil laws of the jurisdictions in which these proceedings took place—would be indispensable to the formulation of a sound opinion on the subject.

A Delicate Matter to Reassert Single Status

Also, should it develop that your marriage was void from the beginning, and that it never had attained the validity of a common-law partnership, you would then be confronted with the proposition of intelligently contriving a personally "face-saving" solution of your predicament. Which is to say, of taking steps to publicly reassert your single status, without disclosing the fact that you never had been a wife. And in effecting that delicate transition from pseudo Mrs. to bona-fide Miss you should be guided by a reputable lawyer's skilled advices.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Common Courtesy

Don't Heckle Your Husband

Lots of wives, who are really fond of their husbands, treat them with a surprising lack of courtesy in public.

When they are with a group of other women, they complain about their husbands' faults.

When Henry tries to tell his favorite joke to dinner guests, they beat him to the point and spoil the laugh he hoped for. Or else they interrupt him with, "We've all heard that one, dear."

If he pays too much attention to the attractive blonde in black, they tell the story of the time girl beat him at tennis.

They find fault with the tie and suit he chose after the guests arrive, instead of taking the matter in hand before they come.

And every time Henry takes a drink, they remark, "You's better not have any more, dear. You know what happened the last time."

If those remarks remind you of anyone you know, why not turn over a new leaf? If you think your husband's party manners leave something to be desired, take the matter up with him at home and help him keep up his front in public.

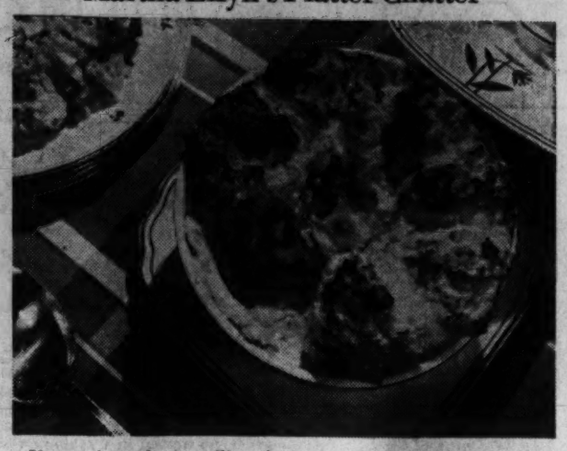
Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



If you have been guilty of ingratitude to the potato now is the time to make amends. In fact this is the week that is proclaimed as National Potato Week. So let's salute this old faithful by making the best possible dishes of it.

A versatile meat-saving potato dish is Seafood Pie. It's the kind of a dish that will please a hungry man or satisfy the eager appetites that youngsters bring home from school or play. This meat-saving dish is one that you will want for your wartime recipe file. The recipe follows:

SEAFOOD PIE

Simmer 1 small minced onion, and ½ cup celery, chopped in 4 tablespoons butter or margarine, until tender. Blend in 3 tablespoons flour, and add 2 cups milk slowly to make a smooth sauce. Season with salt and pepper. Combine with 4 cups sliced or cubed cooked potatoes and 2 cups salmon, tunafish, or clams. Turn into casserole and top with meat pie crust cut in fancy shapes. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) until crust is brown and filling bubbly, about 20 minutes.

MEAT AND VEGETABLE PIE CRUST

Cut ¼ cup shortening into 1 cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Combine 1 beaten egg yolk, 2 tablespoons water, and 1 teaspoon lemon juice, and add to first mixture to form soft dough. Knead gently and roll 1-3 to ½ inch thick. Cut in desired shapes, and bake on top of individual or large meat or vegetable pies.

P. S. If you have a left-over potatoe, hash brown it for breakfast. It will make one egg seem like two. You will find that crunchy hash-brown potatoes will do wonders to make the family forget that hard-to-forget bacon.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Two weeks on a diet can't make much of a dent in your way of thinking about food. It is easy for you to slip back to the idea that eating small meals like coffee and doughnuts for breakfast—is just as good as counting all those calories.

Oh, is it? That's your mistake. As I believe I have pointed out, doughnuts are all curves and calories and even though you take your coffee black, you get a neat 400 calories. Or, maybe you just take Danish pastry or a honey bun with your black coffee. More calories!

The real drawback to such a breakfast is not that pastries come so high in calories, but that when you are on a low-calorie diet these foods take the place of those needed to keep you fit.

For fewer calories you can have fruit juice, an egg, a slice of toast, a bit of butter and coffee. There you have vitamins, minerals and protein and get a good start for the day.

Many a girl who likes to think she is cutting calories restricts lunch to dessert and a beverage. She likes dessert and she is making no sacrifice in the way of calories. A much better low-calorie meal would consist of bouillon, a sandwich and fruit. Or, almost any luncheon plate with the beverage but without the roll, gravy and dessert.

If you can hold out on your diet until around 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but then feel you must have something to eat, by all means eat something. But don't succumb to the fountain specials for the day. Instead, have a cup of hot tea—with a lump of sugar. The sugar only counts 25 calories. Or, you might have one of the cola beverages.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Feasts of Reason

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, has come to the aid of the world food shortage by renewing her campaign against public stuffing.

"It's ridiculous to ask a housewife to concoct a meal out of a leftover dab of spaghetti and a piece of bologna," the reformer told her press conference yesterday, "when mobs of people are stuffing themselves at perfectly useless banquets, luncheons and cocktail parties. What is more, they are wasting a lot of time they could put to better use against Hitler.

"I have campaigned for years against the useless eating that is done in this country," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "It was a bad enough practice before the war. Now it is criminal."

First on her list of useless eating events, Mrs. DeGoofey enumerated the "so-called banquet." "We can't have a convention of any kind even in wartime without one or more banquets," she declared. "The gravy manufacturers and the lapel gadget men have to banquet when they get together to discuss how to help win the war. If we are organizing a movement to conserve pencil stubs, we must have a banquet to start it off."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a men's club editor, "these banquets certainly are not featured by gourmet's viands. Did you ever try to eat a breastless half spring chicken without using your fingers?"

"No, because I always use my fingers when necessity demands," was the reply. "However, you have proved my point. Why waste such a chicken by serving it? Why not let it die of anemia or grow up to make a meal for some one in this hungry world?"

Second in her list, Mrs. DeGoofey named the lavish private spread at home or hotel. "Every one ought to be able to get along on a three-course meal these days," she declared, "and in most cases the waistline would be the better for it. People still seem to have the pioneer idea that their main purpose in coming together is to eat. I say let them dance or play dominoes or possibly talk for a change."

Also a menace to food conservation, said Mrs. DeGoofey, were women who were continually lunching with each other either in their clubs or privately. "It seems impossible," she said, "for women to hold a benefit to launch aid for starving refugees without doing a lot of eating themselves. They must have luncheons, teas and cocktail parties at which to make plans. Then all the committees must lunch together to perfect plans. And everybody winds up with a lot of wasted time and added pounds."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a "gracious-living" editor, "don't you think it is our duty to keep life as usual on the home front?"

"No, frankly I do not!" was the reply. "Moreover, I am tired of that phrase, which has become the camouflage for the actions of too many adolescent people. However, I am not advocating anyone's starving. But I feel strongly there should be less public organized eating and less private gorging both in the interest of the war and of general decency. However, if these events are to continue, I am going to ask Congress to legislate that menus be simplified (and prices also reduced, let me add emphatically!) and that programs be shortened. 'If we are to have plain living and high thinking in our private lives, we certainly ought to have them in our public activities."

"But wouldn't such a regime leave a lot of professional public diners hungry?" asked a specialist on banquet coverage.

"I expect to solve the problem as most of our other war problems are being solved—by the aid of the soy bean," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "My dietitians are now working on a special stuffed soy bean hors d'oeuvre on which we will fill up all guests before banquets begin to such an extent that they will not even begin nibbling at the hard rolls before the fruit cup arrives."

Myron Cramer—

Army's Judge Advocate General Is World-Wide Dispenser of Justice as Boys in Khaki Will Be Boys in Far-Flung Outposts of Conflict

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Monday.

By Patricia Grady

Global justice is the business of the Judge Advocate General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer.

A sergeant in India decides to spend a few weeks admiring the beauties of the Taj Mahal, without confiding his decision to his commanding officer; a private in Australia finds he can nicely augment his pay by a little trading in bootlegged goods; a lieutenant in North Africa unofficially borrows a jeep for a few days private sortie into the nearest village; a hot-headed corporal in Ireland can't resist the temptation to join a brawl in the local pub—and the odds are that the cases of these far-flung miscreants will wind up on the desk of mild-mannered General Cramer.

Harris & Ewing
GENERAL CRAMER

This chief legal officer of the Army, who hit the headlines last year when he and Attorney General Francis Biddle prosecuted the eight saboteurs, is a Harvard-trained lawyer who is the embodiment of the "actions speak louder than words" school. Retiring about himself and his personal history, the general has no reticence about talking about his organization and officers. He heads a compact group of legal technicians that since the war has expanded and spread out all over the world.

"During wartime," points out the general, "the percentage of offenses undergoes a sharp drop. The reasons for this are numerous, but most important is that the men feel they have a real job to do. And the Devil has a hard time finding idle hands for his work in combat areas. The boys have too many other things on their minds to concentrate on getting into trouble.

General Doesn't Like Homework

"In the Army," he continues, "there is less chance for crime than there is in civil life because of routine and discipline. But on leave, when it comes to trouble possibilities, the soldier has just as wide a choice as the civilian."

From his pleasant, many-windowed office in the Munitions Building, General Cramer runs his organization with quiet efficiency. An unspectacular worker, he toils over his papers long hours in the evening but will stay at his desk rather than do homework. Some time ago he told his staff that six full days a week was as much work as any man could efficiently do and that Sunday would henceforth and definitely be a day of rest for the JAG's office. The general, however, frequently ignores his own edict.

There is an air of informality in the office where the general and his staff are all on first-name terms. Since his job is essentially a paper-work job, General Cramer takes as many shortcuts as possible and is a great believer in substituting the telephone for the typewriter. Measured in his statements, this small-statured officer has a judicial respect for complete accuracy and precision.

Settles Claims Of Civilians

But almost 200 military courts are not the only thing General Cramer has to worry about. Patents used by the War Department are in his bailiwick as are the legal aspects of the Army's numerous contracts. And with our forces moving into scattered countries another facet of his job has a growing importance. The JAG's office is charged with dealing with claims that may arise from the civil population of areas occupied by our troops or property damaged by them. That means that even now in North Africa a member of his staff is probably settling the claims of an irate Arab whose camel has suffered a broken rib from too close association with an American tank. The quick and fair disposition of such claims can have a large effect on our relations with battlefield countries.

This 52-year-old officer, who was raised from colonel to two-star general when he assumed his present post, was born in Portland, Conn. He attended school at the Cazenovia Seminary in New York, and was graduated from Wesleyan University in his native State. Deciding on a law career, he took his law degree at Harvard Law School and spent three years practicing law in New York. In 1910 he went to Tacoma, Wash., to serve as deputy prosecuting attorney until the war broke out and he entered the Army as a private.

From Private To General

With a cavalry unit of the National Guard, he came up through the ranks and before the war was over was wearing captain's bars. During his overseas duty he attended the Army War College at Langres, France, and became acting chief of staff for the Forty-first Division. After the war he donned academic robes as a professor of law at West Point, following which he was Judge Advocate of the Philippine Department.

General Cramer, who is a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, wears several ribbons on his uniform including the Order of the Black Star. With his wife and daughter, Mary, he lives in an unpretentious home on Fordham Road.

Post Profile — Mrs. John McCloy

Wife of Assistant Secretary of War Does Inspiring Wartime Work; Helps Take Care of Mothers and New-Born Infants in Their Homes Each Morning; Is Trained Nurse

No one is more genuinely modest and reluctant to discuss herself and her wartime activity than Mrs. John McCloy, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War. Actually, though, she would emphatically deny it, no woman in Washington is more entitled to praise than she for doing an unusual, unselfish and inspiring war job. Mrs. McCloy does not feel that she is doing her job unselfishly for she enjoys every minute of it; she does not feel that it is unusual, for she is following along lines for which she is well trained, and for which she has a great talent. "I am merely performing a friendly service in a field that I know," said Mrs. McCloy in a recent interview.

For quite some time Mrs. McCloy has been disappearing from her Georgetown house early each morning and returning quietly after lunch with no word as to her whereabouts. Most people had no idea even where she could be reached.

Has Natural Bent for Nursing

What Mrs. McCloy does is much too inspiring to be kept a secret from others who wish to be useful at this time; she takes care of mothers and their new-born infants in their homes. Having only her mornings to give, Mrs. McCloy determined to follow along lines for which she had been trained through experience with her own children and through practical everyday knowledge. With the help of an obstetrician who realized the immediate value of such a service (with the overcrowded hospitals and shortage of nurses) Mrs. McCloy was able to place herself "on call" for post-hospital obstetrical cases and volunteered to work every morning in the homes of mothers with babies who needed care at a very important time.

Many a seaman's home is familiar with Nurse McCloy and her basket of necessities with which she arrives. First she cares for the mother; then bathes the baby, makes its formula, does the laundry and helps in every way possible to make things easier and more comfortable at a trying and confusing time. With her naturally soothing manner it is obvious that she is a help as well to the baffled and panic-stricken fathers who constantly worry and brood over their first-born.

In the last war Mrs. McCloy, then a student at Smith College, was too young to follow her burning ambition to become a nurse and go overseas. However, her age did not prevent her from working each summer at a well-known hospital in New York. It was soon discovered that she had a natural bent for nursing, and much to her delight she was placed "on trial" as surgical nurse.

"Should Follow Lines They Know"

"I worked so hard in that period that they had to let me continue," modestly said Mrs. McCloy, "I worked for 22 months as a surgical nurse."

Obviously it was this hospital training as well as first hand experience with her own children that prompted her to undertake her very original and magnificent war job. Working entirely alone, except for the guidance and help of doctors of high standing who assign patients to her, Mrs. McCloy goes quietly along with her friendly service. "I love doing it, and feel that it is one service that a woman who has children of her own may render to another woman, at a difficult time."

When asked what she felt women should do in the way of war work she declared emphatically, "They should follow the lines they know best and for which they are trained. For instance, I wouldn't be nearly as good as a radio operator as I am doing my own work; too much time and training would be necessary. The whole manpower problem and the important problem of conversion would be improved immeasurably if women would follow the work for which they are best suited, and not embark on fields of service that are foreign to them and will require long periods of technical training."

Isabelle Hartz Is Married to Capt. Nordlinger

The marriage of Miss Isabelle Hartz, daughter of Mrs. J. McCauley of Philadelphia, and the late Dr. George Hartz, to Capt. Walter Nordlinger, A. U. S., son of Mrs. Nordlinger and the late Meyer Nordlinger of Washington, took place on Sunday, January 17, at Pickett House, Camp Pickett, Va. Chaplain William Iconogle officiated at the ceremony, held at high noon.

The bride, given in marriage by Capt. Irving Bezanson of Boston, wore a pearl gray flannel suit with accessories to match and a spray of orchids. Mrs. Benzanson was her only attendant, wearing a blue crepe frock. Capt. Charles Hutzler of Baltimore served as best man.

A wedding breakfast was held afterward for members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests at the home of Mrs. Sue Morris.

That 'Nice Lady From Maine' Makes No Bones About Being Thrilled Over New Committee Appointment; a Passing Note On the Palm Beach 'Season;' the Navy Woman's Handbook

"That's the lady from Maine . . . and she sure is a nice lady," said an unidentified man to his luncheon companion yesterday, as Representative Margaret Smith, with three constituents in tow, appeared in the doorway of the House restaurant. She had just come from her first executive session, attending as a new member of the Naval Affairs Committee, and she frankly admitted she was thrilled over her appointment. "It's exactly what I wanted," she said, "and I know it's going to be very interesting."

Representative Smith

Like virtually everybody else who enters the House restaurant with guests these days, that nice lady from Maine yesterday faced the difficult problem of finding a table; but she managed to get her company of four seated cozily near the center of the room before all the places were gone. Time was when House and press gallery members could drop in any old time and be ushered to a table. Today, only Representatives who come in without guests can find places easily, because they can go to the reserved-for-members section. Also supposedly on the reserved list is the press table . . . but as any reporter will tell you, seats there these days are far too frequently occupied by secretaries, clerks, visiting firemen, lobbyists, or what have you.

Army and Navy officers were all over the place in both the Senate and House restaurants yesterday. Seems, in keeping with the times, they have replaced garden-variety constituents as current visitors on Capitol Hill. In the House restaurant yesterday I saw two Army colonels, six majors, four captains, and I don't know how many Army and Navy lieutenants. Couldn't keep count of them all.

Mention of that particular restaurant reminds me, incidentally, that the famous old-fashioned bean soup, featured on the menu for so long, has moved into second place in popularity. Scotch barley broth now draws more orders than all the other soups listed. Whoever thought it could happen there?

Arriving at my desk yesterday was the new "Navy Woman's Handbook," an exact counterpart of the "Army Woman's Handbook," published some time ago, and written by the same author, Cella Reeves Collins. A compilation of information which every Navy wife and mother will want to have, the book is a complete "Emily Post" for Navy wives; a handy summary of facts pertaining to allotments from salary, insurance and property rights, and a daybook of "do's" and "don'ts" that every service wife and mother should have. The tome might been written with a lighter touch, however. Parts of it are dull; others so deadly serious they bog down in the middle; and still others so thoroughly detailed they make the going pretty heavy. But the same can be said of almost any handbook worthy of the name . . . and there's no doubt this one is worthy. I regret only that somebody with a more spritely line of discourse—somebody, shall we say, like Ethel Gorham, author of "So Your Husband's Gone to War"—could have the same facts, and would present them in a bit livelier fashion.

I don't understand how Palm Beach reporters can write of "the season" this wartime year, tossing off the same adjectives and interlarding their accounts with the same verbal goo they used back in the lush days of peace. But anyway, the recent arrival of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury at the Palm Beach Hotel touched off the usual line of chatter that "the season is in full now that the recognized leader for many years of the Old Guard set has arrived with the Earl and Countess of Pembroke."

Mrs. Stotesbury

An additional note pointed out that Mrs. Stotesbury would be at the hotel until her spacious villa, El Mirasol, "most famous of all homes in the colony, is put in order," and so on, ad nauseum. Truth of the matter is, the Palm Beach "season" this year promises to be chiefly a matter of wartime benefits, with little accent on the usual ostentatious types of entertaining that characterized it in the past. Furthermore, from what I can find out, Mrs. Stotesbury plans to lead as retiring a life at the Florida resort this winter as she has here in Washington the past two years . . . and I can't imagine even the Earl and Countess of Pembroke pepping up a Palm Beach "season" during wartime.

Miss Cowan Is Wed to Lieut. Allen

St. John's Church was the setting for the marriage yesterday of Miss Audrey Cowan to Lieut. Daniel William Allen, U. S. M. C. The 5:30 ceremony was performed by the Rev. Nathaniel Acton and was followed by a reception at the Hotel 2400.

The bride is the daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Cecil N. Cowan of this city, and Lieutenant Allen is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Howard B. Allen of Morgantown, W. Va.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of white faille, fashioned with long pointed sleeves and torso bodice. Her veil of illusion was caught with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and freesia. Miss Suzanne Slingluff, the maid of honor, was costumed in pale coral moire and carried a spray of spring flowers. The bridesmaids, Miss Hannah Jane Boggs and Miss Louise Allen, were attired in pale green and gold moire and carried spring flowers. Thomas H. Sayre acted as best man and ushering were Frank Markey and St. David Astor.

After a short wedding trip the couple will make their home at New River, N. C., where the bridegroom is stationed. The bride made her debut here in 1940 and Lieutenant Allen is a graduate of the University of West Virginia and received his law degree at New York University.

Miss Mary Baker Bride-Elect of Duncan G. Groner

Mrs. Hall Baker of Princeton, N. J., and A. Thornton Baker of Philadelphia announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Lieut. Duncan Goldthwait Groner, Air Corps, U. S. A., of Hartford, Conn., son of Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals, of Washington.

Miss Baker was educated at Miss Fine's School in Princeton, the Shipley School at Bryn Mawr, Pa., and studied in France. She made her debut in Philadelphia in 1936. She is a niece of "Hobey" Baker, famous athlete and ace in the last war.

Lieutenant Groner attended the Woodberry Forest School and Washington and Lee University. He was with the United Aircraft Corp. before entering the Army. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity and the University Club of Hartford.

Purely Personal

The British Ambassador and Viscountess Halifax entertained a group of 25 American sailors and the same number of British tars from 5:30 to 7:30 yesterday afternoon. The servicemen went from the British Embassy to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mellon, where a matching number of girls had been asked for a dance.

Mrs. Aubrey Fischer, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph DeYoung, jr., have been in New York for several days.

Engaged

Miss Doris Lee Huntsberry

The engagement of Miss Doris Lee Huntsberry to Lieut. James J. Lynn, U. S. A., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Huntsberry of this city. Lieutenant Lynn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lynn of New York and Bayport, Long Island.

The bride-elect, who is a graduate of Western High School and who attended Strayer College, now holds a position in the office of the Architect of the Capitol. She is a member of Sigma Lambda sorority.

Lieutenant Lynn attended St. John's University in New York. He is in the Ordnance Department of the Army and at present is stationed at Madison Barracks in New York.

Adams–Galloway Rites Are Set For February 14

Miss Maxwell Galloway, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Galloway of Takoma Park, Md., has set February 14 as the date of her wedding to Ensign William E. Adams, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. Myrtle Adams, of Washington.

The ceremony will take place at 5 p. m. at the National City Christian Church, where Miss Galloway is soprano soloist. The Rev. Dr. Warren Hastings, pastor, will officiate. A reception for 200 guests will be held at the Washington Club immediately after the ceremony. Instead of soloists for a musical program the choir will sing several selections accompanied by James B. Smiley, organist, who has written a special choral response dedicated to the bridal couple.

The bride-to-be will have Mrs. Henry B. Nowak of La Porte, Ind., for her matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be Mrs. Donald V. Potter, Woodside, Md.; Mrs. Roy Snapp, Miss Edna Baithwaite, Washington, and Mrs. Jean Seaman, Takoma Park.

Ensign James A. Hewitt, U. S. N. R., Takoma Park, will be best man, and ushers will be Ensign Rodman Heath, Salt Lake City, Utah; Ensign William H. Burgess, Minnesota; T. Litchfield Howe, White Plains, N. Y., and Henry G. Nowak, La Porte, Ind.

Both the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-elect are graduates of American University. Miss Galloway is employed in National Archives. Ensign Adams is assigned to publications in the Bureau of Ordnance.

Invitations have been issued by Miss Dorothy Valentine for a large reception January 27 at her apartment in Washington for the couple. A linen shower was given Tuesday night by Mrs. Leo Tooley and Mrs. Vander V. Holcom at the former's home in honor of Miss Galloway.

Ruth Michael, Richard Penfield To Be Wed Soon

Dr. and Mrs. Walter M. Michael of Cumberland, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Edwards Michael, to Aviation Cadet Richard Penfield, jr., son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard Penfield, also of Cumberland.

Miss Michael is at present with the Commonwealth of Australia War Supplies Procurement in Washington.

Cadet Penfield will be graduated from the Army Air Force Bombadier School in Big Spring, Tex., in February. The wedding will take place during the latter part of that month.

Dr. Michael is the former pastor of Elbrooke Methodist Church in Washington.

Pasteboards Now Ready For Big Midnight Shows

Earle and Capitol to Present Double Bills; James Cagney Latest to Join Visiting Stars; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

TICKETS GO ON SALE TODAY for the midnight shows to be presented at both the Earle and Capitol theaters on Friday night, January 29, at 11:30 p. m., as an important part of Washington's celebration of the President's birthday.

Zone Manager John J. Payette, of Warner Brothers, and Division Manager Carter T. Barron, of Loew's, Inc., have booked special attractions for that week, which will be combined on the programs at both houses. Tickets, however, will not be interchangeable. Those purchased for the Earle will be honored only at that theater, and those sold for the Capitol will admit to the Capitol only. They are available at any Warner Brothers or Loew house in Washington.

JAMES CAGNEY

Entire proceeds of both of these special performances, of course, will go to swell the contribution to the fight against infantile paralysis. Uniform prices have been set at bargain rates at both theaters—considering the magnitude of the entertainment to be presented in each. Orchestra seats will be $2.20 each, including tax; balcony, $1.65, tax also included.

As we were saying, the sale opens this morning.

No matter which house is attended, the bill to be seen will include Romo Vincent, Mary Small, Dean Murphy, Whitson Brothers, Bobby Whaling & Co., Mati and Hari, Carol King, Jane Fraser, Roberts Sisters, the 16 Rozyettes, the 16 Rhythm Rockets, Jo Lombardi and the Earle Orchestra and Sam Jack Kaufman and the Capitol Orchestra, with Lynn Allison. In addition, the patrons of both houses will greet all the famous Hollywood personalities coming to the Capital for the celebratio:

And that reminds me. James Cagney is today's addition to the list of visiting stars who have accepted the entertainment committee's invitation to lend luster to the illustrious event which this year is being observed for the eleventh time in the Capital of the Nation. If Master Cagney's distinguished performance in the title role of "Yankee Doodle Dandy" eluded you, his more recent appearance with Ann Sothern and Margaret O'Brien, the diminutive Duse, in the special "United Nations Week" release, "You, John Jones," probably hasn't. Jimmy's presence brings life to any party.

Hardly A "First Time," But No Less Notable

When Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," dedicated to American youth in the war, is presented at the single "command performance" in the National Theater Sunday night, as a further noteworthy event in the observance of the President's birthday, Washington will be the eightieth city to see the finest dramatic tribute to the American soldier that has come out of the war. Seventy-five cities have seen it performed by college and semiprofessional groups that are members of the National Theater Conference. A second company organized by the Playwrights' Company has already played in Rochester and Detroit and opened last Monday night in Chicago. The Broadway production—the one to be seen here—is admittedly one of the outstanding hits of the season in New York. With both balconies sold out by mail, only orchestra seats at $5.50 each remain available.

"Beauty and the Beast," third in Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York's season of six plays, will be presented in the National Theater on Saturday morning, January 30, at 10:30 o'clock. Twice before, at widely separated intervals, "Beauty" has played the National under the same happy auspices, and each time has sold out the house. This time, a new Beauty, Peggy Barton, has been chosen for the leading role. Pretty enough to piease the most cynical youngster, Miss Barton has enjoyed a considerable New York career as model and dancer, having appeared in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Importance of Being Earnest" and, during the past year, in many important radio assignments.

Dots and Dashes

The hard-hitting shock troops to be seen in the titular roles in "Commandos Strike at Dawn," next on the screen at the Earle, are authentic counterparts of the Canadian units that took such heroic part in the raid on Dieppe . . . When Lester Cowan produced the picture for Columbia, it could not be revealed that he was using bona fide commandos in the commando attack that climaxes the picture . . . At that time it was not supposed to be known that Canada had such troops in training . . . Since it all came out at Dieppe, it can now be told that Director John Farrow filmed the picture with the help of Maj. Gen. A. E. Potts, commanding officer in the Vancouver area, who organized and led the first commando raid on Spitzbergen, Norway, and is one of the United Nations' foremost authorities on this type of warfare . . . A demonstration of all types of professional dancing will be given at the Phil Hayden Studios, on Dupont Circle, Sunday night at 8:30 . . . Public invited up to the capacity of the main ballroom . . . The Thespian Study Club of Washington will present Oscar Wilde's three-act comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest" in Armstrong High School Auditorium tomorrow and Saturday nights, with special student matinee tomorrow at 2 . . . Sunday, 6 to 8 p. m., the Variety Club is unreeling a few miles of spaghetti, at $1.50 per person, seasoned with "Special events and lots of fun" . . . Fun enough just trying not to get all tangled up in the intractable yardage!

Happens Every Time

After four years on the European stage, Christine, Czecho-Slovakian star, came to America. She spent a year in New York, learning colloquial English from dress models, correct diction from coaches. Then she tackled Hollywood. Debuting in RKO-Radio's Caribbean voodoo thriller, "I Walked With a Zombie," she plays one of the living dead—with never a word to say, correct or colloquial.

"Waterloo Bridge," Robert Sherwood's moving story of World War I, starring Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor is being held over for a second week at the Little Theater.

A heart-tugging drama built about the broken romance of two young Londoners, separated by the outbreak of the first world conflict, "Waterloo Bridge" is gaining considerable sympathy from today's audience who find much in common with the central theme. The story is told in retrospect by Captain Cronin, the man in the case, played by Robert Taylor, as he leaves for World War II.

The supporting cast is headed by C. Aubrey Smith, Lucille Watson and Virginia Field.

—LOUELLA O. PARSONS—

He Should Be Triplets!

Hollywood, Jan. 20 (NS).—The lady who wrote me so sarcastically that she would bet money Gary Cooper wouldn't do all the movies I've rumored for him, can "eat them words." Gary should be triplets, or at least twins, for he not only gets the gambler role in "Saratoga Trunk," at Warners, but he will also do "The Story of Dr. Wassell" for Cecil De Mille—and those, my friends, are two whopping assignments. The reason Gary can do both pictures is that "Saratoga Trunk" starts February 15 and De Mille won't call him until late April, which is still a tight squeeze.

INGRID BERGMAN

Meanwhile Sam Wood, who will direct "Saratoga Trunk" is staging a one-man campaign for Ingrid Bergman to play Clio, opposite big Coop. A telephone call was also put through to Vivien Leigh in London about playing the role and she did not turn down the offer. However, she is stipulating that if she accepts her entire salary be donated to British War Relief. But Sam doubts she will leave Laurence Olivier.

No young actress has ever taken harder wallops from the critics than Diana Barrymore. But in spite of the barbed darts, her pictures, "Between Us Girls" and "Nightmare," have been cleaning up and exhibitors write in glowing terms about Diana.

This is a little matter that has not escaped Universal, a studio where they have always been convinced that the paying customer is right. Walter Wanger, who has Diana under personal contract, has great confidence in her, too, so, critical reviewers to the contrary, Diana will "emote" next in a book Walter has just bought, "Looking for Trouble," by Virginia Cowles. It's about a femme war correspondent, a sort of female Quentin Reynolds.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ann Edmonds, Warner actress, and her husband, Bill Herndon, writer, will be three come spring; Sergt. Gene Autry winged in over the weekend to talk over "This Is the Army" with Hal Wallis; Capt. John Detlie flew back to Seattle after hurrying here to be with Veronica Lake; the Norman Krasnas have adopted a little girl.

Richard Whorf is passing the shining hours while he recuperates by writing a short story.

—LEONARD LYONS—

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 20.

Leon Henderson has his reservation for Mexico, and after that he has a room reserved at the Mayo Bros. Clinic . . . Six members of the 40-odd contingent who went to the Burma Road with Daniel Arnstein returned here. Of these six, three already have gone back to China and the other three soon will join them . . . In the Barnard-Columbia senior poll, Rita Hayworth was voted the person with whom the male seniors would like to be stranded, and Errol Flynn won the female votes. The dean, however, refused to release the Flynn item, although Errol won it by six votes . . . The Marquis de la Falaise, former husband of Gloria Swanson and Constance Bennett, is writing a book, for Stackpole, about his experiences in Dunkirk, "Through Hell to Dunkirk."

RITA HAYWORTH

It's safe to mention this now: On the day before the invasion of Africa, Army officers telephoned Toots Shor's, the Stork, Monte Carlo, Morocco, Copacabana and other night spots, asking: "Has General Eisenhower been in tonight?" They left messages for the general in these places where "news" of his alleged presence in town would surely and quickly become known . . . Justice Ferdinand Pecora will officiate at the wedding of novelist Jerome Weidman . . . William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy," which is MGM's most promising movie of the year and is a Book-of-the-Month Club selection, will be a syndicated comic strip, too. Don Freeman will draw the cartoons.

Tony Canzoneri, the former fight champion, enters the Army . . . Lessing Rosenwald, who returned to his Philadelphia home after his resignation from the WPB, had to go back to Washington—because the fuel-rationing board advised him that his large Philadelphia house would require too much fuel oil . . . The publishers of Bob Casey's "Torpedo Junction" have received an order for 350 copies, from the crew of the cruiser to which Casey was assigned, during the Wake, Marcus and Midway engagements

An organization of walking clubs wrote to Elmer Davis and asked for advice about their plan to make a pilgrimage to Washington . . . "No pilgrimage to Washington since Coxey's Army has achieved anything," Davis replied. "But if you're determined to do it, I'd advise you (1) to bring sandwiches because the restaurants are overcrowded here, and (2) postpone your pilgrimage until the spring, when the weather is more conducive to sleeping on park benches.

Maj. Eric Knight, the author of "This Above All," has a large map of the world in his office in Washington. On that map, last fall, visitors saw green pins placed in a pincer sweep from Norway at one end and France at the other. Those green pins, denoting the imminent Second Front, remained there until early in November, when the thorough Knight added some red pins to indicate the course the Nazis would take in their retreat from this invasion of the continent . . . Then, when Africa proved to be the invasion sector, his friends questioned his "military strategy" . . . "I did it deliberately," Major Knight now insists, "to throw you off."

Frances Farmer's friends have organized and are sending wires of protests because of the cruel, shameful manner in which her case —one which so obviously is pathological—was handled by the court . . . Senor Magellan, the Brazilian newspaperman visiting here, said of the American libel laws: "Quite a paradox. You may print something which nobody knows and you're safe. But if you print something which everybody knows, that's libelous" . . . The publishers of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" received a cable from Sweden, asking for the Swedish drama rights. "We promise that none of the money will go to Germany," the cable assured—but mentioned nothing of money going to Author O'Neill.

Time magazine, in preparation for a front-cover story on Major General Kenney, wired its South Pacific correspondent—who was away on another job—and then wired the Army officials for details and anecdotes about the general's career. A quick response, with a full story about the Army man, came from the Navy's Lieut. Joe Bryan 3d . . . At Leon & Eddie's, Eddie Davis announced: "If any of you customers came here by car, I just want to say two words—'Hello, Doc'" . . . Phil Baker may join the next theatrical task force going abroad to entertain the troops . . . If Billy Rose does the Navy show, his Aquacade will be a minor part of it.

Pix

The wrath of the jungle is exercised no end in the super-colossal production of "Typhoon," which is being revived for three days at the Pix Theater. Dorothy Lamour's shortened sarong plays second fiddle in the Technicolor film to some of Mother Nature's most vigorous devices, which includes in addition to the howling wind of the title, a jungle fire which all but scorches the scanty "scanties" modeled by Miss Lamour.

The story, overshadowed by the pictorial sequences of the catastrophic events, has something to do with a castaway white girl who defends her tiny island against the ravages of pearl hunters and wolves (the human kind.)

The supporting players are Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, J. Carrol Naish and Jack Carson.

Bette Makes Good

Bette Davis is a former Golden Eagle Girl Scout. She learned to make fires without matches in Central Park.

HEDDA HOPPER

Obviously Had Truck With the Right People!

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 20.—Billy Wilder introduced me to Peter Van Eyck on the set of "Five Graves to Cairo" and then told me his story.

GINGER ROGERS

They were friends. Peter's a song writer, has done many things for Hildegarde, among them "There's My Heart" and "Dream On." But couldn't get into that racket here, so he took a job driving a truck. Ran into Billy and said "Could you get me anything—an extra part—anything?" So Billy phoned his friend Nunnally Johnson and said "Listen, Nunnally, I've got a great actor here I'd like you to meet. I think he'd suit one of those parts in 'The Moon Is Down.'" "Send him over." He went, got a test, and one of the leading roles . . . Came the time for Billy to cast "Five Graves to Cairo" and he needed Helmut Dantine, who was so good as the German flier in "Miniver." He wasn't available. So Billy thought of Peter. Called up Nunnally, said "How was that actor I sent you?" The reply was "Great!" Now Peter's got the part with Billy and is up for a long-term contract at Paramount. He has naturalness, force and — thank heaven—doesn't look like an actor. But they'll have enough actors in that. They've got Franchot Tone and Von Stroheim playing Rommel . . . I commiserated with Anne Baxter, who's playing the lead in it, about not getting "Bernadette." She said "Really, I don't mind, Hedda. This part's just as good."

Hurray for Love!

No one was more surprised than I when Ginger Rogers told me she was about to marry Jack Briggs. Ginger's worked so hard going from one picture to another and getting her salary up to $175,000 per picture that she's had very little time for relaxation, and lots of close friends worried that she was missing the greatest thing in life, which is marriage to the right man. Well, she's found him.

Victory Gets 'Em

Lester Cowan, producer of "Commandos Strike at Dawn," phoned from New York that preview of the picture in Washington, sponsored by the Norwegian Ambassador, was a thrilling sight. Over a thousand members of all nations came in buses, street cars, and afoot. In Buffalo, picture opened in a defense plant, was over at 5 a. m., and he said, "You've never heard such applause." He wouldn't have believed it possible. Wants to do the same thing in Los Angeles, either at Lockheed or Douglas. He was surprised the hit it made with women. He'd been told they won't go for war pictures. They will if there's victory at the finish of it . . . Lester's waiting in New York for an interview with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

Kids Should Grow Up

When the Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville romance was at its height it was Tim Holt who intruded. Then Jackie started going out with June Horne. Now I'll be darned if Tim hasn't transferred his affections from Bonita to June. That Jackie Cooper is a good picker, but evidently Tim has more lasting qualities . . . Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" goes out over the ether for Lux, which may set a precedent for a free show. I understand several of the Army shows hereabouts are looking for a commercial sponsor, which is a dangerous situation any way you look at it.

Wrong Guy Spooning

Sorry I got my Englishmen mixed up. I had Charlie Laughton being spoon fed by his hired hand on the set and find out now it wasn't "Butch" at all—but Brian Aherne. I'm told Laughton's latest picture, "This Land Is Mine," is the best he's done. Studio's keeping it under wraps so the public can discover that for themselves . . . Dudley Nichols, one of the few writers who's seen "For Whom the Bell Tolls," tells me it's one of the greatest if not the greatest picture ever turned out in Hollywood . . . Otto Preminger's wife is arriving to spend the rest of the winter with him. Otto has been assigned for "Candle in the Wind." Yes, he's a Nazi again and they're calling him "the man you love to hate."

New Nutrition-Aid Program Planned for Federal Workers

They're fixing to shoot the green and yellow vegetables, cooked and raw, and other energy-building foods, tasty and otherwise, to Federal employes here to speed up the work of war.

The nutrition division, Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, and the District Nutrition Committee, will eat a luncheon of the nutritional foods they prescribe at 12:15 p. m. today in the Mayflower Hotel and discuss a nutritional program for all Government establishments here.

Announcing the meeting, M. L. Wilson, assistant director in charge of nutrition, ODHWS, said, "Federal employes constitute a vital segment of the warworkers of the country. Upon their efficiency depends their ability to do their jobs well. Yet, the efficiency of such workers is frequently undermined by poor health which can often be traced to poor nutrition. The success of this program to help Government workers improve their knowledge of nutrition and their food habits depends upon the cooperation of every Government department."

Luncheon speakers will include Secretary of Agriculture Wickard; War Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, and Harry B. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission chairman. Discussion will include how current rationing affects the eight basic foods the program will lean upon—milk and its products; oranges, tomatoes, grapefruit; green or yellow vegetables; other vegetables, fruit; bread and cereal; meat, poultry or fish; eggs; butter and other spreads.

Civilian Authority Partly Restored In Hawaii

The White House announced yesterday an agreement had been reached for a "substantial restoration of functions to the appropriate civilian authorities" in Hawaii.

While details of the new arrangements, worked out by the War, Justice and Interior Departments and Hawaii's governor, are to be announced in the territory, the White House said martial law would remain in effect and writ of habeas corpus would continue to be suspended.

The commanding general of the Army's Hawaiian Department retains jurisdiction over some civilian activities, but the agreement "contemplates that there will be further restoration of jurisdiction to the civilian authority when and as the military situation permits."

Martial law has been maintained in Hawaii since shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

WPB Instructs On the New Art Of Slicing Bread

Housewives' dismay over the shortage of "bread knives" since the announcement last month that bakeries would stop slicing bread on January 18 is absolutely unnecessary, the War Production Board announced yesterday stating that the "bread knife" is a thing of the gay nineties.

Any keen-edged slicing knife will cut that loaf of bread, according to the Consumer Durable Goods Division, WPB.

A few of the Dos and Don'ts suggested by the division were:

Don't use knife blades for any purpose other than for cutting foods. They are not for opening cans or bottles, prying lids off jars, nor for whittling.

Do keep them in order in drawers or on the wall.

Don't soak knives in hot water. Wash knives as soon as possible after use, dry well, then put away.

Do apply a little scouring powder on the blades each time they're washed to avoid staining.

Don't try to sharpen knives on the edge of stove or stone window ledge. This destroys real cutting edge.

Do use a sharpening steel. A few light strokes frequently on each side of the blade will keep a knife sharp for a long time.

Don't throw a knife away just because the handle has worked loose. A few taps on the rivets with a hammer, holding the handle flat against a hard surface will make the handle tight again.

Missing School Buses Are Safe

Gallup, N. Mex., Jan. 20 (U.P.).—Three school buses loaded with nearly 100 children reached Gallup late yesterday as plans were being made to search for them along blizzard-swept roads.

Chief of Police Kelsey Presley said none of the children appeared to suffer any ill effects, although the buses were delayed more than three hours.

A fourth bus, also reported missing, returned to its starting point 18 miles east of Gallup.

Two simple steps to amazing New STRENGTH ...better LOOKS!
1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach
2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!
You may overcome the discomforts or embarrassment of Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion
Frequently the stomach becomes sluggish in pouring out its digestive juices to make use of the food eaten . . . likewise, wear and strain of worry, overwork, colds, or other illness often reduces one's blood strength.
At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system . . . insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.
If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!
SSS Tonic is especially designed to build up blood strength when deficient . . . and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue. These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!
Build Sturdy Health
so that the Doctors may better serve our Fighting Forces
Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. S.S.S. Co.

Navy Lists 2 D. C. Seamen As Missing

Two Washington area men were reported missing and one wounded by the Navy Department yesterday, listing 72 casualties for the Nation.

The latest list inaugurated a new policy of day-by-day announcements of casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Named in this area were:

Missing: Winter Payne BELL Bell, seaman second class, U. S. N. R., son of Daniel F. Bell of 321 Thirteenth Street Northeast.

Missing: Francis Joseph Connolly, seaman second class, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Katherine Connolly of 2154 North Pollard Street, Cherrydale, Va.

Wounded: Verne Dean Close, aviation radioman, U. S. N., son of Verne D. Close, sr., of 1506 North Nicholson Street, Arlington, Va.

Since December 7, 1941, to date, 21,453 casualties have been reported by the Navy Department: 16,149 for the Navy; 5100 for the Marine Corps; and 204 for the Coast Guard.

U. S. Cargo Ship Sunk, 2 Passengers Made Prisoners

Miami, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP).—A passenger suspected of knowledge of ship movements was taken prisoner aboard an Italian sub which sank an American merchant vessel in the South Atlantic late in December, survivors revealed here recently.

Four passengers from the ship, including Robert Carter, a seaman of New York City, said the Italians also took an Italian-speaking mess boy into custody.

Hearing the boy speak Italian, one of the sub crew shouted "Traitor" in English.

Damage to the lifeboats prevented all but one from floating, and 53 survivors were jammed into it.

The sub surfaced and the crew of bearded Italians covered the survivors with machine guns while the captain asked questions.

The lifeboat was sighted by a plane three days later.

12 Are Indicted In Air School Building Frauds

Attorney General Biddle announced yesterday indictment of 12 persons at Fort Worth, Tex., on charges of false claims and conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with construction of air training schools at Sweetwater and Lamesa, Tex.

The indictment charges, the Justice Department said, that Joe B. Plosser and Charles A. Prince, a partnership, secured a contract with the Defense Plant Corp. to construct training fields on a cost-plus basis and conspired with the other defendants to receive secret rebates and kickbacks from Victor J. Nelson, the prime contractor.

Mrs. Jack Dempsey Given Alimony Pending Trial

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 20 (INS). Mrs. Jack Dempsey, the former Hannah Williams, today was awarded $2500 attorney fees and $500 a month alimony pending outcome of the former heavyweight champion's suit for divorce.

Dempsey filed the suit in White Plains Supreme Court on January 8, alleging misconduct on the part of his wife. Name of the corespondent has not been divulged, but in ruling on the alimony today the court disclosed that both Mrs. Dempsey and the man named have denied the former champion's allegations.

Trial of the divorce suit has been scheduled tentatively for early next month.

School Milk Plan Calls For Penny Cost

Parents of children now receiving free half-pints of milk in the schools will, it is estimated in 60 to 80 per cent of the cases, pay a penny for the milk, under a recommendation adopted yesterday by the Board of Education.

At present, it was reported by Acting Superintendent Robert L. Haycock, some 25,000 children, grouped as "necessitous," are benefitting by the milk service, under the joint sponsorship of the District government and the Department of Agriculture.

Suggested concurrently by Board President Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle was a plan whereby parents of those students receiving hot lunches will be asked to bear some of the cost now that WPA funds are to be withdrawn from the project January 31. Mrs. Doyle also recommended that committee members investigate the practicability of having paid hot lunches distributed in schools now without such service.

Opening of six white high schools, excepting Eastern and Western, at 8:30 a. m. instead of 9:30 a. m. so that approximately 156 senior business instruction students may leave earlier and work the remaining four hours in business establishments, was approved by the board.

One official proposed at the last board meeting that all the high schools with such courses open earlier for all students in the school. Action was delayed on the proposal to allow a survey to be made determining the number of students enrolled in these classes.

Findings of a recent survey conducted by the D. C. Health Department of the dential condition of junior-senior high school students revealed that 1800 students in white Junior-senior schools need immediate dental attention while some 1600 in the Negro schools are in the same position. In the white junior high schools, the report showed, 65 per cent of the students have dental defects; in the senior units 60 per cent; in the Negro junior high units 86 per cent and in the senior units 88 per cent have defective teeth.

Thomas A. Ward's Rites Set Today

Services for Thomas Albert Ward, 82, Washington born descendant of Col. Ninian Bell, one of Georgetown's first settlers, will be conducted at 9:30 a. m. today at Chambers Georgetown funeral home, 3072 M Street Northwest. Mass will be said at 10 a. m. at Holy Trinity Church, where Mr. Ward was a lifetime member. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Ward, who made his home at 2604 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, died Tuesday. He had worked at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for about 20 years before retiring 10 years ago. Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Ralph T. Weaver of Washington, and three brothers, Albert W Ward and Francis G. Ward, both of this city, and Charles Ward of Falls Church, Va.

Air Raid Hoax Here Empties Film Theater

The Atlas Theater, 1331 H Street Northeast, was emptied in record time during a film last night when two messengers had the manager announce that all air-raid wardens, auxiliary policemen, fire watchers and warden's messengers had been asked to report to their posts immediately.

Charles Clark, manager of the theater, said both of the messengers, who approached him about 10 minutes apart, wore the pins that designated them as warden's messengers and he made the requested announcement.

Auxiliary Policeman Pvt. Wirt F. Smith, attached to the bomb squad of the Ninth Precinct, called his captain, John H. Glotzback, who went to the Lincoln Park Zone 8 post at the Wheatley School and began summoning his staff.

Smith, meanwhile, checked with the precinct, which said no alert had been received there. He then checked with OCD headquarters, discovered the whole thing was a hoax, and called his captain to inform him of developments.

Several auxiliary policemen had been called out meanwhile, and were sent home, but a few remained on duty for a time to make sure nothing was amiss.

Auxiliary policemen of the precinct and patrons of the theater think they have new candidates for the title of "meanest man."

Edison's Physician Declared Suicide

Orange, N. J., Jan. 20 (AP).—Dr. John Hammond Bradshaw, 82, who for 40 years had been personal physician to the late Thomas A. Edison and members of the inventor's family, was found dead here today a suicide in his gas-filled office.

Surviving are a son, John H. Bradshaw, jr., of Madison, N. J., and two grandchildren, John H. Bradshaw, 3d, and Barbara Kellogg Bradshaw. Mrs. Bradshaw, jr., is a niece of Frank B. Kellogg, former United States Secretary of State, and her husband was coordinator in lend-lease activities with the British Purchasing Commission in 1941.

Are You the Man ?

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

"the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

HOUSEHOLD'S RATE 2% PER MONTH ON ALL LOANS
Here are two good rules. 1. Don't borrow unless you must. 2. If you do borrow, get your loan at the lowest rate you can. Household's rate is 2% per month on the unpaid balances. Total cost of $50 loan, repaid in six monthly installments, only $3.58. Many other plans. No endorsers required. No credit inquiries of friends. If a loan is the answer to your problem, phone or visit us.

Hopkins' Son Plays Tag With Death in Africa

By H. R. Knickerbocker
Copyright by Chicago Sun

United Nations Headquarters, North Africa, Jan. 20.—A son of Harry Hopkins is making good in North Africa. Twenty-one-year-old Corpl. Robert Hopkins is one of the most popular members of the United States Signal Corps. He was greeted with cheers today as he returned from one of the most hazardous of his many flights over enemy lines to deliver Signal Corps close-ups of an airfield in No Man's Land.

Corporal Hopkins refused a commission because it would put him behind a desk and he wants to operate actively in the field. He has completely achieved his ambition, as anyone would testify who saw him come in dressed in United States Government issue pants and shoes with Armored Corps steel helmet.

He had not been out of his clothes for five days and his first admitted ambition upon returning to civilization was to bathe.

Young Hopkins had gone out in a reconnaissance plane to take still pictures of enemy positions. A large number of fighter planes was sent along to insure the success of the mission. Hopkins brought back exactly what the Signal Corps wanted.

He has been with the photographic outfit working with Darryl Zanuck. This time he had photographed one field in No Man's Land and had been landed on the ground on another field, where he was to have been met by automobile.

Before his transportation arrived the Germans came over and bombed his group, but Allied anti-aircraft fire brought down two Junkers almost in his lap. He photographed the Germans machines as they fell blazing. On the way back he was dive-bombed by several German Stukas, and as is customary in this part of the world, he spent hours during several days in ditches, watching enemy planes strafe his vehicle.

Fire Razes Md. Home

Frederick, Md., Jan. 20.—The residence of Herschell Pickett, near Winfield, was destroyed by fire yesterday as firemen from Sykesville looked on unable to assist in fighting the flames. The road leading to the Pickett property was too muddy for the Sykesville fire equipment to negotiate.

Publishers Gain Right to Reduce Delivery Service

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—An award announced today by an arbitration committee named to settle a dispute between the Newspaper and Mail Deliverers Union and the Publishers Association of New York recognized the publishers' right to lay off union members "for economy or business reasons."

The Award, announced by Dr. Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the State Mediation Board, and Fred C. Croxton, of the United States Conciliation Service, also provided that an adjustment board be established to settle disputes arising out of wartime conditions.

By refusing to guarantee complete wartime job security for the 300 members of the union, an independent body, the award recognized the right of each publisher to expand or contract the delivery service for his newspaper.

The security demand by the union was a major issue of a strike which deprived New Yorkers of their daily newspapers for several days last month.

Earlier the WLB granted union members a $5-a-week raise in an interim order.

D. C. Families Hosts to 25 British Seamen

After a round of entertainment highlighted by tea at the British Embassy as guests of the British Amabassador and Lady Halifax yesterday, 25 British seamen now visiting the Capital will be informal guests in a number of average Washington homes today and tomorrow.

The group, which came here with their officers and two chaplains from a "Southern" base yesterday, broke up into pairs last night after a buffet supper and dance at the home of Mrs. Richard Mellon of 1801 Foxhall Road Northwest.

Lodging last night and tonight in 15 homes was arranged by Grover Hartman, secretary of the defense committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Churches. Many of these families are planning special dinners and small gatherings today with young people from their churches invited to meet the British guests.

After being met in the early morning yesterday at the station by USO officials, the sailors breakfasted at All Souls Unitarian Church served by the Red Cross canteen, and then toured the city with Government girls on night shifts as their guides. Lunch was at the Y. W. C. A.

The afternoon was free until time for high tea at the embassy, when 25 American seamen were also guests. Young women from the Government and the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Corps joined the group for Mrs. Mellon's party, which was arranged through Mrs. Martin Vogel, chairman of the OCD home hospitality committee.

Gas Ration Requests To Be Heard Tonight

Volunteer workers will be on duty at the headquarters of the Alexandria rationing board in the Odd Fellows Hall, 218 North Columbus Street, Alexandria, tonight from 7:30 to 9:30 to review requests for supplementary "B" and "C" gasoline rations, Executive Secretary James S. Douglas, jr., announced yesterday.

Holders of "B" and "C" cards scheduled to expire this week or within the next few days may report at either of the evening sessions to arrange for renewal, Douglas said. New applicants for supplemental allotments also are invited to report.

Waiter Sought In Attack Slaying Of 12-Year-Old Girl

MARTHA PUNT

New York, Jan. 20 (AP).—The body of a 12-year-old girl, brutally ravaged and slain, was found today in a West Side flat a short distance from her home.

Police said the girl, Martha Punt, had been raped, her head bludgeoned by a machinists 'hammer and her throat cut. Her body was found in the blood-soaked bed of a 45-year-old waiter, missing since yesterday, when he failed to report for work.

Police sent out an alarm for the man, Ellis Ruiz Baez, known as Ellis Ruiz, a Puerto Rican. His roommate, Iraris Fandino, also a hotel worker, had reported that a "dead boy" was in Ruiz's bed.

A younger sister of the slain girl related that Martha and another playmate had visited the flat occupied by the two men and that on one occasion Ruiz had given each of them money.

Firemen Auxiliary Formed

Washington, Va., Jan. 20.—Officers of the newly organized auxiliary of the Rappahannock Fire Department are Mrs. Mary Partlow, president; Mrs. L. V. Merriel, first vice president; Mrs. T. C. Lee, second vice president; Miss Ruth Stevens, treasurer, and Miss Hilda Thornton, assistant treasurer.

School Staffs Took $56,265 In War Bonds

Employes of public schools here purchased $56,265 in war bonds and stamps last month, bringing to $689,403 the amount purchased by them last year, it was reported yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Education.

Students in the various schools also invested a considerable portion of their savings in war securities last year and continue to invest.

In many high schools records were not kept in which the amounts purchased by the students and the employes were differentiated; so a clear-cut report in these schools was not possible. However, following are available figures on purchases made in the high schools:

Roosevelt High School, student body and personnel, purchased $30,000; students and personnel in McKinley High School purchased more than $13,000; students in Western High School purchased $7000; Anacostia personnel purchases totaled $16,447, while the student body accounted for $985 in a special drive December 4; both groups at Eastern High School rang up $16,760; Woodrow Wilson students bought $11,000, and Calvin Coolidge High School purchases in both groups came to $7173.

Edgemoor Group Elects Gardner

Joseph C. Gardner, architect, 7110 Clarendon Road, Edgemoor, was elected president of the Edgemoor Citizens Association last night. Kent Clark was named vice president and Mrs. J. Schaffer secretary and treasurer. Delegates named to the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Fire Board were: John R. Hooper, Charles Embrey, J. W. Cummings, John Cole, Bode Walters, Earl Everhart and Sidney Karr.

The association approved the proposed seven or nine-man set-up for the Montgomery charter board, the suggested paid executive to administer the charter board's actions, and the proposal to raise the base pay of policemen to $2100.

Axis Counts Chickens Long Before Hatching

A Berlin radio broadcast recorded by the Associated Press last night said that Germnay, Japan and Italy had signed an economic cooperation pact yesterday to utilize "each in his own economic sphere," their resources for "totalitarian warfare against common enemies," and also as the basis for permanent collaboration "after a victorious termination of the war."

The agreement, to run concurrently with the 10-year military assistance pact of September 27, 1940, was signed at Adolf Hitler's headquarters by Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the Japanese Ambassador, Hiroshi Oshima, the broadcast said.

An identical pact was signed in Rome by Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the Japanese charge d'affaires, Shunichi Kase.
